

WOMEN DID IT

From a Classroom To a New Morality

The report that there were more than 2,800 "therapeutic" abortions in British Columbia hospitals in the first five months of this year—and who knows how many in the old-fashioned, illegal, butcher style—is a reminder once more of the accumulating tragedy that results from the lack of a realistic program of sex education in the schools of this province.

Now that Education Minister Donald Brothers has righteously snipped the chapters on sex from a new Family Life course—an operation that, sad to say, seems not to have stirred public opinion in the slightest—I am suggesting that he be sent to Sweden for a month to see for himself what might be accomplished by a common-sense acknowledgment that the state must accept its responsibility.

In Sweden, as noted here Monday, that acceptance was imposed upon the government 30-odd years ago by the pressure of educators who saw unwanted pregnancies among their students as a denial of the right to an education and by mothers determined that their daughters would not be the innocent victims of ignorance in the realities of sex and contraception.

That was the basic motivation in the early '40s, just as it is now. A visitor to Stockholm today will still see those gigantic posters showing a young Swedish couple and the message: "Barn? Javisst—men när vi själva vill!" A baby, yes—but when we want one!

A deeper motivation by these proud, assertive and independent women was a kind of ultimate emancipation—a genuine equality of sexual relations. That, too, has been a revolutionary victory that seems an all but impossible dream in this part of the world.

The Swedes had a head start, it's true. For better than 100 years Swedish women have had the vote. For 50 years the marriage code has so meticulously defined the legal equality of husband and wife that housework is regarded as "a financial contribution."

But the militant feminist movement that first demanded sex education in the schools has gone far beyond the simple proposition of overthrowing a patriarchal system. Its result has been to free women entirely from servility in sexual behavior.

A Canadian reporter covering that story invariably finds it a two-stage discovery. First, there is the startling discovery of the intensive instruction in the schools on everything relating to sex and particularly on methods of contraception. Secondly, there is the discovery, outside the schools, of a continuing dialogue and search for concepts of morality, within marriage and outside it, always with the final goal that women shall be as free as men, that the sex drive of the woman is to be recognized as no weaker or in less need of satisfaction than the man's.

One of Stockholm's women doctors who lectures frequently in the high schools explained it to me in these terms:

"We are all but free of the double standard that, in the past, so often demanded chastity or frigidity for women. Mature sexuality for the Swedish woman, through education, means that she is being allowed to cope with sexual relationships, as with other responsibilities, without the inhibiting, over-protective morality of the past."

In her own home, this vibrant, attractive woman, happily married for 18 years to a university lecturer, lives to the new code.

"No aspect of our sexual relations is sacrosanct between us," she told me. "We treat each other with absolute honesty. No couple can have satisfactory, harmonious sex relations without telling each other everything. That begins with knowledge. It must be entirely co-operative. When the occasion arises that it is the wife who desires relations then she must feel free to take the initiative."

Such women, the Canadian finds, often seem contemptuous or pitying in talking of our standards.

Dr. Maj-Britt Bergstrom-Walan, a 46-year-old psychologist and author of many of the texts used in sex courses in the schools, told me of a lecture tour she'd made to these shores:

"I'm afraid I shocked the Canadian women when I spoke of our sexual freedom. Their problems, in fact, are no different from those of Swedish women, but they are still hiding them. Their moral values are still imposed by men. Sexually, they are not free. You badly need a bolder program in sex education in your schools if your women of the next generation are to be mature. More importantly you need an immediate program for adults."

Again, a 28-year-old graduate in sociology at the University of Stockholm, recalling her impressions of a North American tour:

"Women are taken, willingly or not, by men in the United States and Canada. Your men rarely understand the needs of women. They are inept, egoistic lovers. But it is the fault of your women for not insisting on equality and honesty. The teasing American woman, the woman who so often uses sex as a gift or a weapon, who accepts frustration rather than hurt the male vanity, is morally indefensible."

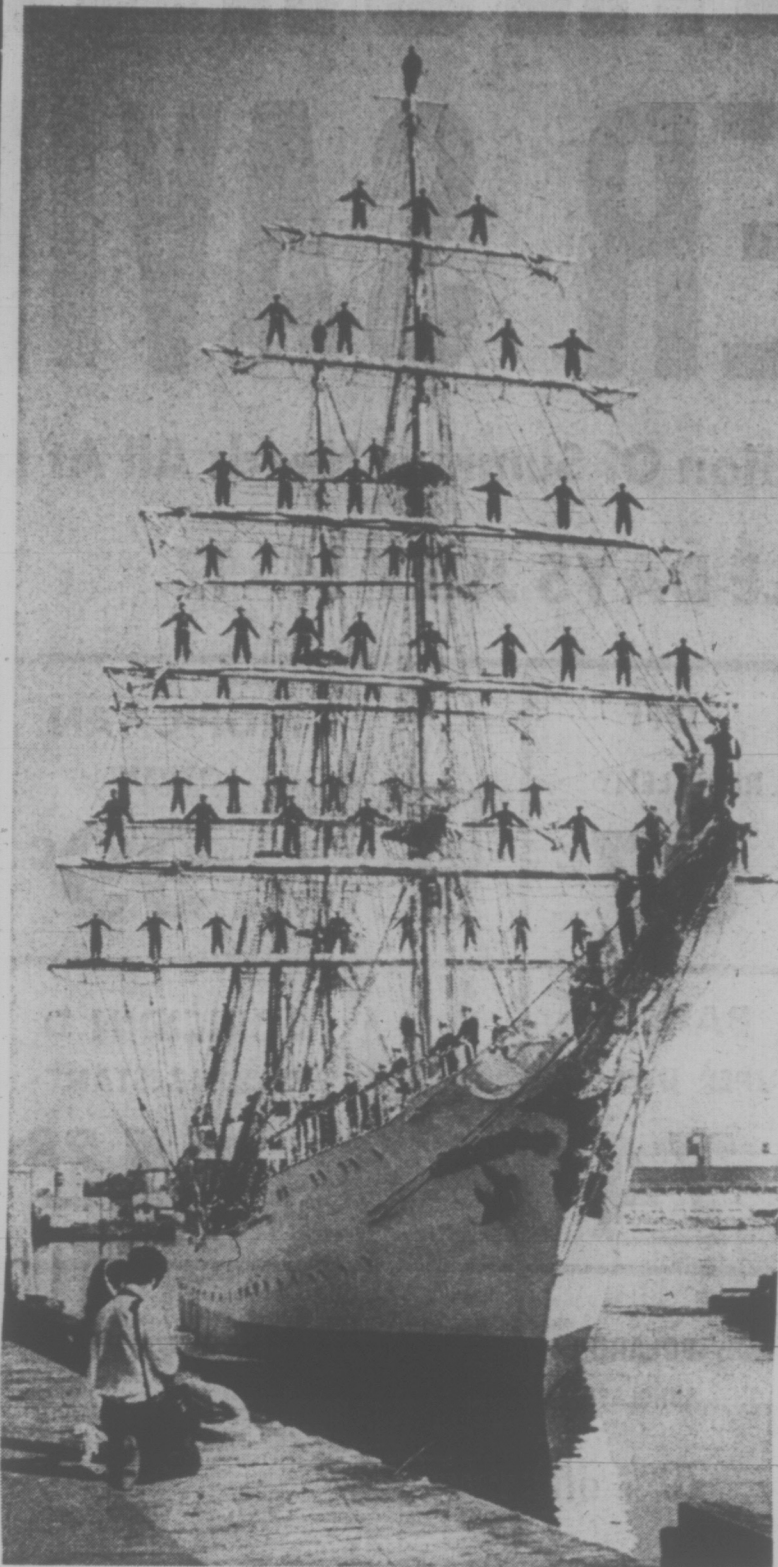

That two-stage discovery is perhaps best summarized in the constitution of the National Association for Sex Education, a private organization financed largely by trade union contributions.

When it was founded the aim was a very simple one: "to make a reality of the conviction that individual health and happiness depends on the freedom to have children only when they are wanted."

Today, nearly 40 years later, its role has been significantly broadened to include "education for harmonious sexual relations, greater candor and knowledge and openness."

A visit to Sweden by Donald Brothers would not be for the purpose of exploring this remarkable transition, but for the more elementary discovery of what can be done in a very practical, logical way to prepare our children for their adult lives. Our need is as simple as it was in Sweden 30 years ago. It is to take sex education off the streets, away from the bumbling, ill-informed parents who simply do not know what it is all about, away from the exploitive, infantile magazines such as Playboy, away from the tragedy of the abortion mills.

If, in the process, the minister of education could be open-minded enough to see the longer-term results, the evolving of a society totally refreshing and decent in its morality and its insistence that women be more than merely second-class citizens, then we might begin, at last, to start catching up.

FIRST NAVAL VESSEL to arrive in Victoria for the centennial naval assembly which will culminate in a sailpast off Beacon Hill Park Tuesday is the 212-foot training barque Arc Gloria from Colombia. At anchorage off William Head since Friday she moved into the Inner Harbor today. Ships from Japan, Australia and the U.S. are coming.

JUNE ACTIVITY 'REASONABLE'

17% Drop in New Housing

New housing construction in Greater Victoria is still running behind last year's performance in actual units started since Jan. 1.

Monthly statistics from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. show the Victoria rate 17 per cent below last year to the end of May. There have been 1,032 units started to date in the capital region vs. 1,246 in the five months of 1970.

A local builder's representative said housing activity in June and so far this month was reasonable for this time of year, particularly in the lower-priced range of dwelling and in apartment construction.

The number of starts for May was 218, up 21 per cent from a year ago.

This compares with a 75-per-cent increase in Vancouver, which had 949 starts in the month.

Since the start of the year Vancouver has had 5,840 starts, or 23 per cent improvement.

In the apartment field (which is included in the total starts) Victoria also is running behind Vancouver and the rate of a year ago in the capital.

CMHC reports Victoria had 21 per cent fewer apartment starts in the five months, compared with a 31-per-cent higher rate in Vancouver.

There were substantial increases in total starts since Jan. 1 for other B.C. centres of more than 10,000 population, the housing agency said.

Bulk of the Victoria starts have been apartment units in Victoria city, numbering 507 since Jan. 1, or not quite half the 1,034 of a year ago. Second largest drop was in Saanich, which had 563 starts in the five months last year and only 195 to the end of May this year.

Provincially, new dwelling starts for May in cities of 10,000 and up numbered 1,276, up 61 per cent, but the total for five months at 6,223 is off 23 per cent.

IT WAS A LONG TIME coming, and maybe it won't last, but let us be grateful for present mercies. Finally it's summer. The sky is blue, the temperature and the barometer reading have climbed. The sun, for which we'd about given up hope, has returned—and what a difference its welcome presence makes!

We need the sun. Denied it for too long, I become gloomy, edgy, and inclined to growl without provocation. The earth needs it, too.

Sogginess departs. The lawn grass is a full shade greener. And though our garden kept on growing through cloudy weeks, it has picked up its heels remarkably these last few days.

Cherries that made slow progress are plumping out and coloring nicely. Late-planted carrots have added half an inch to their lacy tops and our baker's dozen of Salt Spring Sunrise tomato plants have decided to put out their yellow blossoms.

A garden needs water. That can be supplied from a hose. But it must also have sunshine, and that's a commodity for which no artificial substitute will serve.

For lack of sunlight, the Livingstone daisies that Win decided to try this year refused to co-operate. They remained discouraged little clumps of red leaves until the sun all glorious blessed them. Then, like magic, their buds opened into flowers that could have been cut from a child's picture-book, so neat and prim their circlets of stiff-looking petals.

Our cat feels the difference. She spends less time sleeping and more in tigerish prowling. On the first day of sunshine, we found her looking up

Futile to Go On So Rent Board Quits Until Fall

The Rental Accommodation Advisory Board adjourned for the summer Tuesday after its chairman claimed the board's "non-status" made it futile to continue.

The chairman, Bill Tindall, made the comments after Mayor Courtney Haddock, who was scheduled to attend the meeting with a city counter-proposal to the board's demand for a bylaw to give it legal and fiscal status, failed to attend because of illness.

Ald. Robert Baird, council's representative on the board, also did not attend.

Tindall said he would prepare cost estimates on the board's operation to present to the city in September, along with a renewed request for an appropriate bylaw.

The board's grievance subcommittee reported handling 114 calls from tenants in the past two weeks. Chairman Jack Vaio reported one written complaint was being dealt with, involving a $10 security deposit claimed owing by a landlord to an elderly former tenant.

Vaio said he had been unable so far to contact the landlord to "get his side of the story."

CAN'T SEE FILES

After the meeting, representatives of the Capital Region Tenants' Association criticized the board for its apparent failure to accomplish anything. The CRTA representative on the board is George Dawson, and another half-dozen members attended as observers.

The association was angry that Dawson, the only board member representing the rights of tenants, has not been admitted to the grievance subcommittee and is not allowed to see grievance files.

They said an amendment to a CRTA brief which recommended Dawson be placed on the subcommittee has been "received and filed" by the board.

CRTA president Clara Dawson also charged that a brochure planned by the board for distribution to tenants—to be paid for by the city—was an attempt at "brainwashing."

She said the wording and content of the brochure were such that it attempted to nullify the basic tenant rights contained in the Landlord and Tenant Act passed in 1970.

"We're sick about the callous, cavalier attitude of this board," said CRTA officer Ann Tarasoff, "but if we are to accomplish anything in tenant reform we've got to start somewhere."

UNIONIST CRITICAL

Non-Union Bread Prices Rise by Two Cents a Loaf

The price of bread from non-union bakeries has gone up two cents in Victoria.

The increase follows the head of large Vancouver bread companies.

Unsalted loaves now cost 28 cents, sliced white 29 cents and fancy (e.g. French) loaves 30 cents. Buns have gone from 45 to 49 cents a dozen.

Increased wholesale bread prices by McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. and Weston Bakeries Ltd. were brought on by a recent wage settlement. McGavin's vice-president of sale C. R. Murphy said Tuesday.

"Our prices went up all over B.C. last week," Murphy said.

He was referring to a June 1 settlement between bread firms and the Bakery and Confectionary Workers' International Union, representing 700 Lower Mainland and Island bakers. The settlement gave the bakers a $17.50 wage increase on the previous weekly base of $17.50. They'll get another $17.50 effective June 1, 1972.

McGavin bread is baked in Nanaimo and delivered to Victoria. Weston bread comes from Vancouver.

"We've never seen their books, so we don't know whether the increase was justified," said Mel Kemmis, secretary of the western Canada council of the Bakery and Confectionary Workers.

Kemmis said non-union shops which raised bread prices have taken advantage of action by the big firms because they don't have to give their employees benefits comparable to those won by the union.

He claimed this was certainly true of McDonald's Bakery Ltd., the largest local bread producer.

McDonald's Bakery president John L. McDonald said his labor costs aren't as high as for the union companies, but pointed out productivity isn't as high either because the shop is only semi-automated.

"What happens is the price of bread goes up every two years, so everybody suffers through until the chain bakeries raise their prices," McDonald said.

Doug Brock, supervisor of Brodie's Bakery which employs 22 people in two stores, admitted small, independent operators can't pay wages equivalent to those won by the union.

But he said small bakeries and large bread companies are really two different kinds of industry, and it wouldn't be fair to make direct comparisons.

"What people don't understand is that those big bakeries turn out bread with machines, whereas we do it by hand," Brock said.

Blood Shortage Called Critical

A traditional drop in blood donors during the summer holiday period has produced a critical blood shortage which could lead to cancelling operations.

Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the Victoria Red Cross blood donor panel, said today that another poor turnout for next week's three-day clinic "will result in cancelled operations, not only in hospitals in Victoria but throughout British Columbia."

In four days of clinics last month Victoria got only 760 donors when the minimum objective was 800.

Clinics in Victoria will be held Monday and Tuesday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 1:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

On Wednesday the clinic will move to the Student Union Building at the University of Victoria where the hours will be 9:30 to noon and 1:15 to 3:30 p.m.

By degrees their flights became longer and their landings less of a scramble. They are thoroughly air-worthy now, and from swoop, dive and swift pursuit, we suspect they are catching their own insects.

The same sun that greeted their venture into a green world has transformed a beach and sea that for too long were grey. I would like to believe that it also encouraged a large red rock crab into an excursion across a low-tide flat patrolled by crows and gulls.

We didn't notice this crusty adventurer until he checked his collision course to wave a menacing pincer at us. We stood still. The crab backed into a minute pool in the lee of a rock. Its water didn't cover his shell. The first gull to come along would make a breakfast off him.

While we speculated, the crab elbowed and shuffled, deepening his retreat until his five-inch-wide carapace was barely breaking the surface. Then, steadily bubbling, he scrubbed the front rim of his shell against the sand. A patina of sand-grains coated his tell-tale red. Finally, with first one pincer and then the other, he added shreds of seaweed to his camouflage.

Win completed the job for him by adding a spread of crinkly green sea lettuce. Then we left the beach to crab and birds, and the life-renewing sun.

SUMMER'S HERE AT LONG LAST

Get out the shorts and the sun tan lotion — the warm weather is here to stay at least until Friday.

The thermometer soared to 74 Tuesday, five degrees lower than this year's record of 79, set May 11. It is expected to creep higher in the next few days.

Boaters in the Strait of Juan de Fuca have been warned that the ridge of high pressure covering the coast has brought a fog hazard.

Weather office officials say a thermal trough now off Oregon and Washington may move in, clearing the fog.

But the sun stays.

Air Canada Shutdown Looms

Times News Services

Air Canada's ground staff returned to work Tuesday night after voting in favor of rotating strikes which could begin Thursday and which might force the airline to shut down.

HEFTY FARE VANISHES

TORONTO (CP) — Kanhai Ramgoolam, an East Indian businessman, experienced double trouble Tuesday because of the walkout by Air Canada ground workers.

The walkout caused postponement of Mr. Ramgoolam's flight to New York, where he had a business meeting.

He paid a cab driver $210 in advance to drive him to New York. The driver disappeared with the money, apparently to buy gasoline, and didn't come back.

The cab later was found abandoned, and Mr. Ramgoolam missed his appointment.

Police said Felix Irvine Rogers, 28, of Toronto was arrested and charged with theft and illegal possession of hashish.

Phones Ringing In Bell Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phone companies kept service going as up to 500,000 U.S. workers went on strike against the Bell system today but prepared to halt repair service and installations.

Supervisory personnel filled in at switchboards after members of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America walked out at 6 a.m. EDT. Brief wildcat walkouts preceded the strike in many cities.

A union spokesman said the virtually nationwide walkout would last at least two weeks because of complicated labor ratification procedures.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said it was too early to determine the effects.

"But people can expect to hear a lot of male voices when calling the operator," said information officer Chuck Dynes.

SYSTEM AUTOMATED

Because telephones are so highly automated, most calls will continue to go through until lack of maintenance causes breakdowns.

In strike-affected areas many new telephone installations were halted, as was repair service on all but government-operated telephones.

The strike by the CWA and allied unions is over wages and fringe issues, including the CWA's demand for an agency shop, and the company's alleged "anti-feminist" job policies.

Jordan Attacks Rebels

By The Associated Press

Jordanian army units dislodged Palestinian guerrillas from populated areas in northern Jordan today after they refused to leave voluntarily, a government spokesman said.

He denied charges by the Palestinian resistance movement that the army is trying to liquidate the guerrillas in Jordan and accused them of firing on farmers in a bid to destroy the country's economy.

The return to work ended a 24-hour "study session" by members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. The one-day walkout disrupted Air Canada flight across the country.

Chief union negotiator Mike Pitchford said it is reasonable to assume the rotating strikes will not begin until Thursday.

"But we will not know definitely until later today," he said.

Jack Baldwin, the airline's president, warned: "There is a strong possibility that we might be forced by rotating strikes to shut down completely."

TOO MUCH WORK

He said the walkouts "come at the peak of the summer travel season and the volume of work would be too much for a skeleton staff to handle for any length of time."

Mr. Pitchford said it was not the union's intention to disrupt Air Canada services to the point where the airline could not function.

"All we want to show is that we have no intention of accepting the ultimatum offered by the airline Friday," he said.

Negotiations through a federal mediator for a new contract broke down Friday.

In Ottawa, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey made it clear Tuesday night his department is in no hurry to thrust itself into the dispute.

While acknowledging in an interview his department had a service to provide, and was standing ready to mediate the dispute if called upon, Mr. Mackasey said:

"Although a strike would be inconvenient and costly, we can cope through use of other carriers."

DONE BEFORE

"We did this two years ago and I'm sure we could again."

He was referring to a previous strike by Air Canada workers into which the department stepped in after 40 days.

The minister said that "should either side officially request federal intervention, mediator R. Nat Gray was ready. He took part in the talks until they broke off."

The mechanics and ground personnel began returning to work in Toronto around 5 p.m. (EDT) Tuesday and in Montreal an hour later. They returned to their jobs in Winnipeg at 6 p.m. and in Vancouver 7 p.m., local times.

An Air Canada spokesman in Toronto said there were no flights cancelled after 6 p.m. and operations returned to normal by 9 p.m.

Toronto International Airport was hardest hit by the one-day walkout. The spokesman said 41 Air Canada departures from Toronto were cancelled Tuesday before the workers returned. Another 14 were late and 32 left on time.

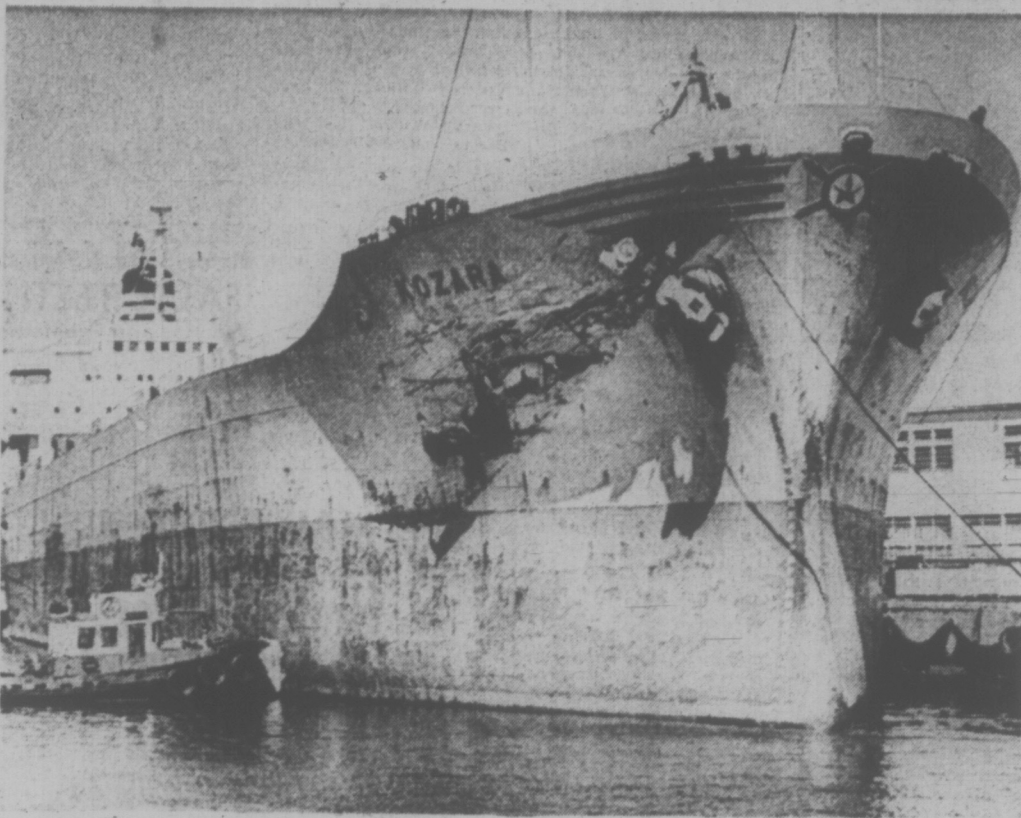

In Montreal, where the airline cancelled a total of 28 flights during the walkout, an airline spokesman said normal services were expected to resume early today.

'NO REAL DELAYS'

At Winnipeg, a spokesman said there were "no real delays and no cancellations" after the workers returned.

An Air Canada spokesman in Montreal said the rotating strikes were expected to be aimed at the four major travel points where the walkouts occurred Monday evening. Only about 1,000 of the union's members are strung out in other centres served by the airlines.

Peace Talks Clouded As U.S. Envoy Resigns

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuters) — President Nixon worked today on a response to the latest Viet Cong peace initiative, a situation clouded by a request by David K. E.

Bruce to be relieved as chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks.

The move by Bruce, 73, was confirmed by the Western White House as Nixon was reviewing the Viet Cong plan put forward two weeks ago. Informal sources said Bruce wanted to quit for personal reasons.

Nixon might discuss today the timing of Bruce's departure when he again meets Henry A. Kissinger, his national security adviser who arrived here Tuesday after a globe-circling tour.

Bruce apparently asked to be relieved when he was in Washington in May.

Diplomatic observers believed a leak of Bruce's resignation request upset the administration and was almost certain to complicate its response to the Viet Cong peace plan.

Kissinger discussed the peace plan with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon and with Bruce in Paris.

White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler appeared to indicate that Nixon is anxious to keep Bruce in Paris because of the delicate state of the negotiations there and the interruption which might result while a new American master the problems.

But diplomatic observers felt the Communists would regard Bruce as a lame duck with no real mandate to negotiate seriously, which might force the president to replace him quickly.

WOULD ATTEND GENEVA-TYPE PARLEY

Peace Talks? Invite Us!—China

HONG KONG (AP) — China is willing to take part in a new international conference on Vietnam along the lines of the 1954 Geneva parley that ended France's war in Indochina, the leader of the Australian Labor party said today on his return from Peking.

Party leader Gough Whitlam headed a delegation of Laborites who spent 12 days in China and talked with Premier Chou En-lai and other leaders.

"I discussed the Geneva conference and its revival with Chou," Whitlam told a news conference, "and the Chinese are quite willing to participate in any renewed Geneva conference."

Whitlam, whose party is opposed to Australia's participation in the Vietnam war, did not enlarge on Chou's ideas about a conference in Vietnam, but he said:

"The administrative arrangements for a revived Geneva-type conference would have to be more in an Asian framework."

WHITLAM gets the message

He noted that the convening powers of the 1954 conference — Britain and the Soviet Union — were both European, and only one of the three nations on the International Control Commission set up to police the agreement was Asian. The three nations are India, Canada and Poland.

Whitlam sent Australian Prime Minister William McMahon a cable from Peking saying he was convinced the Viet Cong's peace proposal July 1 gave the United States "an honorable opportunity for early disengagement."

He said today he still believes this and added that China endorses the Viet Cong proposals.

The new feature of the Viet Cong plan was a proposal for the release of all prisoners of war simultaneous with U.S. troop withdrawals if the United States withdraws all its forces by the end of the year.

3 Ships Collide In Fog

By DOUG MacRAE

Three freighters collided in fog off Race Rocks at 6:05 a.m. today, sending all three back to drydock for repairs.

There were no injuries.

Reports from the scene said the 650-foot Yugoslav bulk carrier Kozara was in collision with two smaller freighters, the Swedish-registered Hoegh Miranda, and the Nordglint, registered in Norway.

The Kozara, her badly-rusted green and white hull punctured in three places above the water line and with ruptures pouring water into holds 1 and 7, limped into Esquimalt Graving Dock at 11:15 a.m.

The freighter, empty and riding high in the water, had two ragged 10-foot gashes in the bow and a low lateral gash in the side near the stern, all about halfway up the hull.

A dock spokesman estimated it would take a week to 10 days to make repairs. The Kozara was en route to Vancouver to pick up general cargo.

The smaller Miranda and Nordglint, both loaded, were anchored off Royal Roads before being taken in to Burrard Drydock in Vancouver for repairs. Facilities at Burrard aren't adequate to cope with the huge Kozara.

Early reports said the Miranda suffered bow damage and the Nordglint a gash in the side of her hull. The Nordglint is shipping some water at anchor.

Ken Briggs of King Brothers, agents for the Kozara, said a complete investigation would be needed to determine the cause of the three-way collision.

"The only thing we can figure at the moment is that there was fog out there," Briggs said.

Ship Sinking Hoax 'Hard to Trace'

Campbell River RCMP said today it will be "extremely difficult" to track down those responsible for Tuesday's ship sinking hoax.

"It's our baby now," a spokesman said. "We have some optimism, but it's going to be extremely hard and we have a lot of legwork to do."

The investigation follows a series of messages allegedly from a sinking Soviet freighter late Monday night and a rescuing fishpacker named Delta which claimed to have picked up 14 Russian seamen.

Vancouver Island and mainland rescue crews could track down neither the freighter nor the fishpacker in an extensive search of 15 hours.

PUBLIC MISCHIEF

RCMP Supt. J. M. Nelson said in Victoria he was viewing the affair from the public mischief point of view, but added there are Criminal Code statutes that apply as well.

He said the affair was extremely serious because there might have been a bonafide emergency during the 15-hour search and crews would have been wasting time on a practical joker.

"Air-Sea rescuers operate on instant reaction and can't sit around asking questions about whether or not a given call is legitimate," he said. "I'd like nothing better than to have this person or persons brought before a court."

Rescue craft included a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox, an RCMP Goose aircraft from Patricia Bay, the Coast Guard cutters

Racer and Ridér, the RCMP launch Massett from Campbell River, CNAV Endeavour, RCMP launch Regina from Victoria, RCMP launch Little Bow II from Powell River, the Coast Guard hovercraft from Vancouver and the Tracker aircraft from Patricia Bay.

Major Gordon Bissell, commanding officer of Pacific Rescue Centre at HMC Dockyard, said cost of the operation ran into unknown thousands of dollars. Unable to estimate a figure, he said it did cost nearly $1,800 alone for use of the Buffalo twin-engine aircraft.

FIRST HOAX

Captain R. M. Stewart of the centre said this was the first hoax in his two years at the centre or, as far as he knew, in the memory of other rescue officials.

"We do get calls from people who think they've seen a catastrophe and it turns out to be a mirage, but we've never had a call like this before."

The first fake call was received by B.C. Telephone in Campbell River by ship-to-shore radio-telephone and messages continued until 1:45 a.m. Tuesday.

DISEASE SPREADS

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — A disease similar to sleeping sickness spread rapidly through horses in Mexico and Texas today, with the number of sick animals reported in Texas alone increasing to 500 from 130 in a day.

The disease — called Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis — or VEE — is blamed for the deaths of 3,000 horses in Mexico.

There were 100 horses reported sick in Texas on Tuesday and 500 today. Seven Texans and thousands of Mexicans have come down with the flu-like illness.

Air Canada Shutdown Looms

Air Canada's ground staff returned to work Tuesday night after voting in favor of rotating strikes which could begin Thursday and which might force the airline to shut down.

The minister said that should either side officially request federal intervention, mediator R. Nat Gray was ready. He took part in the talks until they broke off.

The mechanics and ground personnel began returning to work in Toronto around 5 p.m. (EDT), Tuesday and in Montreal an hour later. They returned to their jobs in Winnipeg at 6 p.m. and in Vancouver 7 p.m., local times.

An Air Canada spokesman in Toronto said there were no flights cancelled after 6 p.m. and operations returned to normal by 9 p.m.

Toronto International Airport was hardest hit by the one-day walkout. The spokesman said 41 Air Canada departures from Toronto were cancelled Tuesday before the workers returned. Another 14 were late and 32 left on time.

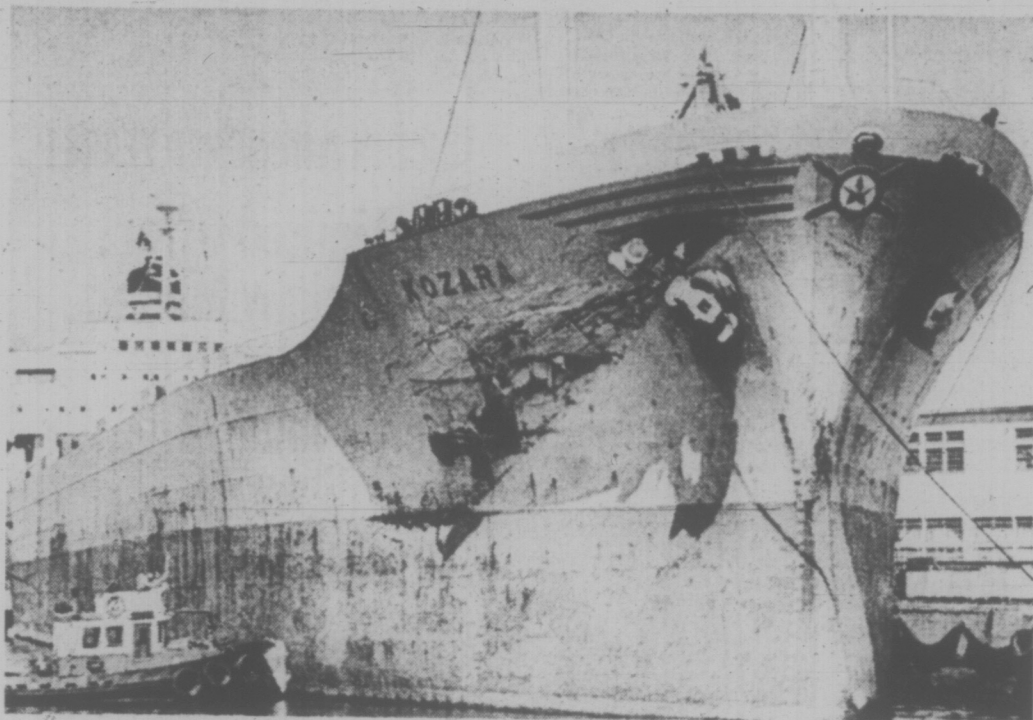

In Montreal, where the airline cancelled a total of 28 flights during the walkout, an airline spokesman said normal services were expected to resume early today.

'NO REAL DELAYS'

At Winnipeg, a spokesman said there were "no real delays and no cancellations" after the workers returned.

An Air Canada spokesman in Montreal said the rotating strikes were expected to be aimed at the four major travel points where the walkouts occurred Monday evening. Only about 1,000 of the union's members are strung out in other centres served by the airlines.

All Freighters Drydock-Bound

By DOUG MacRAE

Three freighters collided in fog off Race Rocks at 6:05 a.m. today, sending all three back to drydock for repairs.

There were no injuries.

Reports from the scene said the 650-foot Yugoslav bulk carrier Kozara was in collision with two smaller freighters, the Swedish-registered Hoegh Miranda, and the Nordglint, registered in Norway.

The Kozara, her badly-rusted green and white hull punctured in three places above the water line and with ruptures pouring water into holds 1 and 7, limped into Esquimalt Graving Dock at 11:15 a.m.

The freighter, empty and riding high in the water, had two ragged 10-foot gashes in the bow and a long lateral gash in the side near the stern, all about halfway up the hull.

A dock spokesman estimated it would take a week to 10 days to make repairs. The Kozara was en route to Vancouver to pick up general cargo.

The smaller Miranda and Nordglint, both loaded, were anchored off Royal Roads before being taken in to Burrard Drydock in Vancouver for repairs. Facilities at Burrard aren't adequate to cope with the huge Kozara.

Early reports said the Miranda suffered bow damage and the Nordglint a gash in the side of her hull. The Nordglint is shipping some water at anchor.

Ken Briggs of King Brothers, agents for the Kozara, said a complete investigation would be needed to determine the cause of the three-way collision.

"The only thing we can figure at the moment is that there was fog out there," Briggs said.

Customs officials were going over the Kozara at noon before insurance representatives, the ship's agents and crew sat down to figure out the accident.

The skipper of the Kozara, Capt. Marko Kordic, 38, said the first of the smaller freighters collided with his 23,000-ton vessel in dense fog.

Kordic, who has 15 years' experience as ships' officer, said the third freighter collided with the other two seven minutes later.

The Kozara was en route to Roberts' Bank to take on a load of coal for Europe.

Most of the freighters' 36-member Yugoslav and Italian crew, which includes nine women, were asleep at time of the first collision. None was injured.

Peace Talks Clouded As U.S. Envoy Resigns

HADDOCK SUFFERS HEART ATTACK

Mayor Courtney Haddock suffered a mild heart attack Tuesday and was taken to the Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he is reported to be resting comfortably.

City Hall this afternoon said he is expected to return to his office within two weeks.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuter) — President Nixon worked today on a response to the latest Viet Cong peace initiative, a situation clouded by a request by David K. E.

Bruce to be relieved as chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks.

The move by Bruce, 73, was confirmed by the Western White House as Nixon was reviewing the Viet Cong plan put forward two weeks ago. Informal sources said Bruce wanted to quit for personal reasons.

Nixon might discuss today the timing of Bruce's departure when he again meets Henry A. Kissinger, his national security adviser who arrived here Tuesday after a globe-circling tour.

Bruce apparently asked to be relieved when he was in Washington in May.

Diplomatic observers believed a leak of Bruce's resignation request upset the administration and was almost certain to complicate its response to the Viet Cong peace plan.

Kissinger discussed the peace plan with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon and with Bruce in Paris.

White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler appeared to indicate that Nixon is anxious to keep Bruce in Paris because of the delicate state of the negotiations there and the interruption which might result while a new American master the problems.

But diplomatic observers felt the Communists would regard Bruce as a lame duck with no real mandate to negotiate seriously, which might force the president to replace him quickly.

WOULD ATTEND GENEVA-TYPE PARLEY

Peace Talks? Invite Us!—China

HONG KONG (AP) — China is willing to take part in a new international conference on Vietnam along the lines of the 1954 Geneva parley that ended France's war in Indochina, the leader of the Australian Labor party said today on his return from Peking.

Party leader Gough Whitlam headed a delegation of Laborites who spent 12 days in China and talked with Premier Chou En-lai and other leaders.

"I discussed the Geneva conference and its revival with Chou," Whitlam told a news conference, "and the Chinese are quite willing to participate in any renewed Geneva conference."

Whitlam, whose party is opposed to Australia's participation in the Vietnam war, did not enlarge on Chou's ideas about a conference in Vietnam, but he said:

"The administrative arrangements for a revived Geneva-type conference would have to be more in an Asian framework."

WHITLAM gets the message

He noted that the convening powers of the 1954 conference — Britain and the Soviet Union — were both European, and only one of the three nations on the International Control Commission set up to police the agreement was Asian. The three nations are India, Canada and Poland.

Whitlam sent Australian Prime Minister William McMahon a cable from Peking saying he was convinced the Viet Cong's peace proposal July 1 gave the United States "an honorable opportunity for early disengagement."

He said today he still believes this and added that China endorses the Viet Cong proposals.

The new feature of the Viet Cong plan was a proposal for the release of all prisoners of war simultaneous with U.S. troop withdrawals if the United States withdraws all its forces by the end of the year.

Ship Sinking Hoax 'Hard to Trace'

Campbell River RCMP said today it will be "extremely difficult" to track down those responsible for Tuesday's ship sinking hoax.

"It's our baby now," a spokesman said. "We have some optimism, but it's going to be extremely hard and we have a lot of legwork to do."

The investigation follows a series of messages allegedly from a sinking Soviet freighter late Monday night and a rescuing fishparker named Delta which claimed to have picked up 14 Russian seamen.

Vancouver Island and mainland rescue crews could track down neither the freighter nor the fishparker in an extensive search of 15 hours.

PUBLIC MISCHIEF

RCMP Supt. J. M. Nelson said in Victoria he was viewing the affair from the public mischief point of view, but added there are Criminal Code statutes that apply as well.

He said the affair was extremely serious because there might have been a bonafide emergency during the 15-hour search and crews would have been wasting time on a practical joker.

"Air-Sea rescuers operate on instant reaction and can't sit around asking questions about whether or not a given call is legitimate," he said. "I'd like nothing better than to have this person or persons brought before a court."

Rescue craft included a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox, an RCMP Goose aircraft from Patricia Bay, the Coast Guard cutters

Racer and Rider, the RCMP launch Massett from Campbell River, CNAV Endeavour, RCMP launch Regina from Victoria, RCMP launch Little Bow II from Powell River, the Coast Guard hovercraft from Vancouver and the Tracker aircraft from Patricia Bay.

Major Gordon Bissell, commanding officer of Pacific Rescue Centre at HMC Dockyard, said cost of the operation ran into unknown thousands of dollars. Unable to estimate a figure, he said it did cost nearly $1,800 alone for use of the Buffalo twin-engine aircraft.

FIRST HOAX

Captain R. M. Stewart of the centre said this was the first hoax in his two years at the centre or, as far as he knew, in the memory of other rescue officials.

"We do get calls from people who think they've seen a catastrophe and it turns out to be a mirage, but we've never had a call like this before."

The first fake call was received by B.C. Telephone in Campbell River by ship-to-shore radio-telephone and messages continued until 1:05 a.m. Tuesday.

SUMMER'S HERE AT LONG LAST

Get out the shorts and the sun tan lotion — the warm weather is here to stay at least until Friday.

The thermometer soared to 74 Tuesday, five degrees lower than this year's record of 79, set May 11. It is expected to creep higher in the next few days.

Boaters in the Strait of Juan de Fuca have been warned that the ridge of high pressure covering the coast has brought a fog hazard.

Weather office officials say a thermal trough now off Oregon and Washington may move in, clearing the fog.

But the sun stays.

Air Canada Shutdown Looms

Times News Services

Air Canada's ground staff returned to work Tuesday night after voting in favor of rotating strikes which could begin Thursday and which might force the airline to shut down.

HEFTY FARE VANISHES

TORONTO (CP) — Kanhai Ramgoolam, an East Indian businessman, experienced double trouble Tuesday because of the walkout by Air Canada ground workers.

The walkout caused postponement of Mr. Ramgoolam's flight to New York, where he had a business meeting.

He paid a cab driver $20 in advance to drive him to New York. The driver disappeared with the money, apparently to buy gasoline, and didn't come back.

The cab later was found abandoned, and Mr. Ramgoolam missed his appointment.

Police said Felix Irvine Rogers, 28, of Toronto was arrested and charged with theft and illegal possession of hashish.

Phones Ringing In Bell Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phone companies kept service going as up to 500,000 U.S. workers went on strike against the Bell system today but prepared to halt repair service and installations.

Supervisory personnel filled in at switchboards after members of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America walked out at 6 a.m. EDT. Brief wildcat walkouts preceded the strike in many cities.

A union spokesman said the virtually nationwide walkout would last at least two weeks because of complicated labor ratification procedures.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said it was too early to determine the effects.

"But people can expect to hear a lot of male voices when calling the operator," said information officer Chuck Dynes.

SYSTEM AUTOMATED
Because telephones are so highly automated, most calls will continue to go through until lack of maintenance causes breakdowns.

In strike-affected areas many new telephone installations were halted, as was repair service on all but government-operated telephones.

The strike by the CWA and allied unions is over wages and fringe issues, including the CWA's demand for an agency shop and the company's alleged "anti-feminist" job policies.

Jordan Attacks Rebels

By The Associated Press

Jordanian army units dislodged Palestinian guerrillas from populated areas in northern Jordan today after they refused to leave voluntarily, a government spokesman said. He denied charges by the Palestinian resistance movement that the army is trying to liquidate the guerrillas in Jordan and accused them of firing on farmers in a bid to destroy the country's economy.

The return to work ended a 24-hour "study session" by members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. The one-day walkout disrupted Air Canada flight across the country.

Chief union negotiator Mike Pitchford said it is reasonable to assume the rotating strikes will not begin until Thursday.

"But we will not know definitely until later today," he said.

Jack Baldwin, the airline's president, warned: "There is a strong possibility that we might be forced by rotating strikes to shut down completely."

TOO MUCH WORK

He said the walkouts "come at the peak of the summer travel season and the volume of work would be too much for a skeleton staff to handle for any length of time."

Mr. Pitchford said it was not the union's intention to disrupt Air Canada services to the point where the airline could not function.

"All we want to show is that we have no intention of accepting the ultimatum offered by the airline Friday," he said.

Negotiations through a federal mediator for a new contract broke down Friday.

In Ottawa, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey made it clear Tuesday night his department is in no hurry to thrust itself into the dispute.

While acknowledging in an interview his department had a service to provide, and was standing ready to mediate the dispute if called upon, Mr. Mackasey said:

"Although a strike would be inconvenient and costly, we can cope through use of other carriers."

DONE BEFORE

"We did this two years ago and I'm sure we could again."

He was referring to a previous strike by Air Canada workers into which the department stepped in after 40 days.

3 Ships Collide In Fog

By DOUG MACRAE

Three freighters collided in fog off Race Rocks at 6:05 a.m. today, sending all three back to drydock for repairs.

There were no injuries.

Reports from the scene said the 650-foot Yugoslav bulk carrier Kozara was in collision with two smaller freighters, the Swedish-registered Hoegh Miranda, and the Nordglint, registered in Norway.

The Kozara, her badly-rusted green and white hull punctured in three places above the water line and with ruptures pouring water into holds 1 and 7, limped into Esquimalt Graving Dock at 11:15 a.m.

The freighter, empty and riding high in the water, had two ragged 10-foot gashes in the bow and a low lateral gash in the side near the stern, all about halfway up the hull.

A dock spokesman estimated it would take a week to 10 days to make repairs. The Kozara was en route to Vancouver to pick up general cargo.

Ken Briggs of King Brothers, agents for the Kozara, said a complete investigation would be needed to determine the cause of the three-way collision.

DISEASE SPREADS

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — A disease similar to sleeping sickness spread rapidly through horses in Mexico and Texas today, with the number of sick animals reported in Texas alone increasing to 500 from 130 in a day.

The disease — called Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis — or VEE — is blamed for the deaths of 3,000 horses in Mexico.

There were 100 horses reported sick in Texas on Tuesday and 500 today. Seven Texans and thousands of Mexicans have come down with the flu-like illness.

Police Picket Lines Press Demands

Information picket lines were set up in Greater Victoria today as policemen pressed their campaign for independent arbitration of their salary dispute as well as pay parity with Vancouver area forces.

It was believed to be the first time the police unions in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt had picketed in a pay dispute.

60 INVOLVED

Sixty members of the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers — 40 from Greater Victoria and 20 from the lower mainland — were picketing the four police stations, the four municipal halls, the legislative Buildings and four major shopping centres.

They carried signs saying Greater Victoria Policemen Are Not on Strike (with the words Are Not in a small size) and Greater Victoria Policemen Give Up the Right to Strike for Independent Arbitration.

They also distributed pamphlets designed to "present the facts of these matters to interested parties in a manner that avoids bias and is unaffected by political or journalistic expediency."

COMPARISONS

The pamphlets outlined salary and working conditions for policemen and contrasted the $728 a month for a first-class constable, or $418 an hour, with such pay rates as bricklayer $5.91, boilermaker $6.30, carpenter $6.06, cement mason $5.50, insulator $5.02, electrician $6.80, plasterer $6.20, retail clerk $4.45, truck driver $4.59 and operating engineer $6.22.

The pamphlets also said these occupations have parity between Victoria and Vancouver, which police do not. First-class constables, under a 1971 agreement earn $887 a month in Vancouver, West Vancouver, Port Moody, New Westminster, Delta and Matsqui.

The pamphlets also claimed that Central Saanich policeman "enjoy parity with Vancouver," but this was denied by a municipal spokesman who said the Central Saanich first-class constable rate is $888 33 a month which is each in seven years instead of three years elsewhere.

The Victoria police commission has offered its force five per cent salary increases (compounded) in each six months of a two-year agreement while Saanich offered five per cent salary increases in each six months of a 18-month contract. Both were turned down.

The Victoria offer would have raised the pay of a first-class constable to $884 a month by the middle of next year, which compares with $887 a month in the Vancouver area at this time.

RIGHTS GIVEN UP

A statement issued by the local police unions said the objective of the one-day information picket lines "is to tell the citizens of Greater Victoria that their police officers do not wish to be placed in a position of going on strike but instead appeal to their police commissions for independent arbitration."

LOCAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

Strikers Say Hospital Can Afford Pay Demands

The spokesman for the strikers at Sandringham Private Hospital said today the company "can well afford to pay the modest increase" sought by employees who have been on strike for 41 weeks.

Jack Phillips, co-ordinator for Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the hospital's ability to pay is proved in its last financial statement.

However, he declined to produce figures saying 20,000 copies of a four-page tabloid plus advertisements in local newspapers will provide the information.

He was commenting after Sandringham co-owner Russell Shepherd of Vancouver said Tuesday he foresaw no change in manage-

(Earlier, the unions unconditionally voted to give up their right to strike in the hopes that the police commissions would agree to arbitration outside the B.C. Mediation Commission.)

The statement said "we ask everybody to think how he would react if the signs said Police On Strike. We are not asking anyone not to cross our information lines because they are only giving information, like an electrician here earns $6.80 an hour and a first-class constable gets $4.18.

"Your police forces, who protect you from what happened in the Montreal police strike, believe they have a right to pay parity and independent arbitration."

NOT THE SAME

Local police commissions have rejected the parity request, saying Greater Victoria is not the same economic area as Greater Vancouver, and that it cannot be afforded. They have also indicated they are not willing to close off their option to proceed to the B.C. Mediation Commission if the current efforts of mediation officer Clark Gilmour are unsuccessful.

The police unions have said they won't appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission because of dissatisfaction over the commission's decision in setting the 1969 and 1970 pay scales which widened the salary gap between here and the mainland.

The pickets today employed a system of using Saanich police at Victoria locations, Victoria police at Saanich, and so on, so that individual policemen did not picket their own places of work.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of that municipality's police commission, said today's picketing was carried out responsibly "as we would expect" and they were "certainly fair" in distributing a one-paragraph memo to other municipal employees requesting them to report for work normally.

POINT OF VIEW

"They have a right to present their point of view in a situation which has two sides," he said.

Curtis added that it "might have been interesting" if the pickets had appeared when property owners paid their annual taxes last month. "They would have reached more people but the reaction might not be as favorable," he said.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock was not available for comment and Acting Mayor, Ald. Tom Christie, declined comment.

One policeman, referring to Haddock's effort to make it an offence to call a policeman a pig, said "what we want is parity, not charity."

Representatives of the police union met for an hour today with Labor Minister James Chabot in a meeting described by both sides as amiable.

Police union spokesmen said they discussed their requests for outside arbitration of the dispute and Chabot repeated earlier statements that he would not force arbitration on anyone. The municipal police commissions have given no indication they will accept.

Chabot said following the meeting he would have no alternative but to grant a request for independent arbitration if both parties to the dispute asked for it. But he said that would not really constitute bypassing the mediation commission because they asked for it. But he said he wouldn't consider such a step as bypassing the provincial mediation commission because the commission exists, only to help settle disputes that can't be settled by other means.

ment policy in the strike because the hospital cannot afford to pay wage increases. Phillips said the union has been seeking a wage scale starting at the minimum wage of $1.50 an hour, increasing to $2 an hour in steps, "and we are prepared to re-open collective bargaining on that basis."

He said that until June 30, when National Nursing Homes Ltd. dropped its management contract at Sandringham, "Mr. Shepherd stayed in the background and all rejections were made by representatives of National Nursing Homes."

A Royal Victoria Yacht Club sailor was in the lead and another was tied with a Seattle pilot for second place at the close of Tuesday's racing for the Thunderbird World championships off Victoria this week.

John Malleson's boat, Sunday, took over the lead Tuesday by adding another second place to the one she earned in Monday's race.

This put her 1/4 of a point ahead of Bob Grundison's Owl, which won Monday's race and finished fourth Tuesday.

Frank Francisco's Virada II of Seattle won on Tuesday. Having come fourth Monday, she is now tied with Owl.

Francisco, an airline pilot, didn't waste the seven hours spent waiting for the wind to come up and the race to begin Tuesday. He put a line over the side and jiggered for rock cod — bagging five for supper!

CHAMP IN FOURTH

Repeating his performance of Monday, Tony Redstone of Pittwater, Australia, won another third position Tuesday. This brings the 1968 world champion into fourth place overall.

All four boats are close in points with Redstone nine points ahead of the defending champion, Tony Parkes of Sydney, Australia, who has a 10th and fifth place to date.

Other boats finishing in the top half of the 43-strong fleet Tuesday were:

6, Victor Smith's Yare, Seattle; 7, Sandy Pratt's Lebar, Seattle; 8, Dave Anstey's Hussy II, Victoria; 9, Rod McBride's Lemolo, Victoria; 10, Ian Stewart's Ahoo-Ya, Victoria; 11, Joseph Ofria's Bravo, Los Angeles; 12, Ian Fife's Kestrel; 13, Gordie Nickells' Redskin, Victoria; 14, Bob McLean's Sonata, Seattle; 15, Jack Williams' Vecta, Seattle; 16, Paul Watson's Nahanni, Vancouver.

Offshore Oil Drill Chief Dies

Operations manager of Canada's first west coast offshore oil drilling rig died Tuesday in Halifax following illness associated with a kidney transplant late last year.

Texas-born Wallace G. Pounds, 39, lived more than two years in Victoria, where he was manager of the SEDCO 135-F drilling rig built by Victoria Machinery Depot for work on more than 12 million acres of offshore drilling permits held by Shell Canada Ltd.

'Alarming' Increase

Federal Department of Transport officials on the west coast are concerned about an "alarming" increase in vandalism to navigational lights and other aids.

District manager Larry Slaght today called for assistance from boaters and warned that destruction of the aids by gunfire, rocks or theft presented a menace to the safety of people afloat.

He said that although vandalism has been experienced in the past there is a large increase.

Slaght said that damage or destruction to any aid should be immediately reported to the department.

Vancouver Man Becomes Judge

Nicholas Mussallem, Vancouver lawyer, has been appointed a judge of the provincial court by the provincial cabinet.

Mussallem is a brother of George Mussallem, Social Credit MLA for Dewdney, and a one-time Liberal party candidate in provincial politics.

Phillips said "there will be a collective agreement" at Sandringham. He also challenged the private hospital to open its books to prove it cannot afford a wage increase.

Shepherd replied that he will gladly do this if the union will "disappear into the sunset after seeing we are in the red. Otherwise it's none of their business. Nobody is making any gravy."

Shepherd added that the union "can say what they like. They were provided with a financial statement some time ago. This is a bit of fancy footwork."

Bourassa Heckled On Rules

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa received an early birthday present in the national assembly Tuesday night to remind him of a procedural error he committed during debate on the controversial bill setting up a Crown corporation to oversee development of the James Bay power project.

Remi Paul (UN-Maskinonge), former speaker in the national assembly, presented the premier with a specially-marked copy of the national assembly house rules—a gift acknowledging the premier's 38th birthday today.

Earlier in the sitting, Mr. Bourassa interrupted heated debate on the controversial $6 billion hydro-electric project by presenting a motion for adjournment. He intended to move that the adjournment last only long enough for the assembly to consider another matter before returning to the James Bay debate later in the sitting.

The confusion began after Mr. Bourassa's wording in presenting his adjournment motion led opposition members to believe he was referring to Article 332 of the assembly's procedural rules.

Invoking Article 332 provides for the withdrawal from debate of legislation with further study to continue only after at least 48 hours if the bill is put back on the assembly's order paper.

ADJOURNS DEBATE

At first, Speaker Jean-Noel Lavoie ruled that Article 332 had been invoked and declared the debate adjourned for 48 hours.

However, after consulting with Harry Blank, assistant deputy speaker, Mr. Lavoie said the motion the premier had intended to present should be accepted.

Mr. Lavoie ruled that the premier had intended to invoke Article 331, which would only have time, allowing him to return to the James Bay legislation when he wanted.

"If the premier knew the rules, he would have invoked this article," Mr. Lavoie said in reference to Article 331. He said the premier's intention to adjourn debate for only a short period was clear despite confusion over the rules.

The assembly was engaged in clause-by-clause study of the James Bay bill when the premier made a motion for a short break during which the assembly would consider legislation calling for establishment of an independent commission to establish boundaries for the province's electoral districts.

DECISION CRITICIZED

Mr. Lavoie's decision to allow debate on the vast power project to continue was heavily criticized by Mr. Paul, who demanded that "a less partisan" decision be rendered.

Mr. Paul was the first member to claim that Mr. Bourassa had committed a procedural error but waited until the initial motion had been passed before declaring that debate had been ended.

Shortly after midnight, Mr. Paul presented Mr. Bourassa with a personal copy of the assembly house rules, a gift for the premier's July 14 birthday.

The premier also was honored, less whimsically, by parliamentary leader Gerard Levesque who presented him a painting in the house of the James Bay landscape.

Despite the confusion in the national assembly, tempers were cool and speeches restrained in comparison with the hectic sittings during the week-end.

TEMPERS FLARED

Verbal insults almost led to fist fights in the legislative chambers in the first two days of debate on the power project but cooler heads prevailed and much of the uproar had died down by Monday's session.

Opposition to the bill centres on the contention that Hydro-Quebec, the province's power utility, should handle the James Bay project instead of the Crown corporation proposed by Mr. Bourassa's Liberals. Both the Parti Quebecois and Union Nationale maintain that other government agencies could exploit other resources such as forestry, mining, oil and tourism, in the James Bay region.

The project intends to harness the power of five rivers flowing into the bay in northern Quebec.

Last week, in response to opposition criticism, amendments were introduced giving Hydro-Quebec the power to sign building contracts for the dams and to market the power upon completion of the project.

Amendments introduced Monday would give the power utility 51-per-cent control of the project and the power to name three of the five directors of the corporation.

Damone, 43, whose real name is Vito Farinola, listed debts at $784,137 and assets at $35,371. The singer said he owed $277,797 in back federal taxes, $18,833 in state taxes and $2,211 in city and county taxes.

He was divorced in Los Angeles Superior Court last month from his second wife, actress Judith Rawlins, and disclosed at the time he was contemplating filing for bankruptcy.

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A 26-year-old man faced charges today of using a removable cast to obtain $1,200 a month in fraudulent welfare checks.

Santa Clara County officials accused Thomas G. Lynch of Mountain View, Calif., of wearing the cast on his arm as proof he could not work while registering at each of the country's six welfare offices. He registered under slightly different names and social security numbers at each office.

He was arrested on grand theft charges when he arrived at one of the offices to pick up a check. He calmly took off the cast and handed it to deputies.

ALBANY, N.Y. — Unless the world's population is cut in half — then held at that level — the ecology movement will not succeed, according to television and radio personality Arthur Godfrey.

Godfrey, a long time advocate of antipollution measures, told 250 representatives of local conservation councils Tuesday that population control is the key to saving our environment.

"None of the work we do — important as it is — will do any good unless we reduce our population by half and keep the population growth rate at zero," Godfrey said. "Man is the only species on earth whose growth rate is greater than zero."

French Slighted

PARIS (Reuter) — The French Communist party, largest political group in the country after the Gaullists, accused China Tuesday of preventing the inclusion of French Communists in a parliamentary mission that left Paris Monday for Peking. ## Ky Officially Breaks With Thieu

SAIGON (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky began his campaign to replace President Nguyen Van Thieu with an open letter today accusing Thieu of wholesale reneging on campaign promises, dictatorial practices and trying to rig the coming election.

Ky said he was dissociating himself from Thieu, making official a split that has been apparent for months, and would run against him in the Oct. 3 election.

There was no immediate comment from the presidential palace.

With a lull continuing in the war, Ky's letter shifted attention to politics.

The vice-president said he was Thieu's running mate four years ago because he wanted to inspire the people and the army "by this expression of unity at the leadership level."

"I had then no other hope than to see you achieve the national objectives which you had defined yourself," Ky said.

"However, none of those objectives has been attained today."

PROMISE NOT KEPT

"You promised to resolve the war, yet more than ever we are locked in a situation of war with no end in perspective."

"You promised social reforms, but our society is fraught with unprecedented injustice and corruption while the soldiers, the civil servants and the privileged citizens are condemned to a life of destitution unknown to this date."

Ky said "unfulfilled promises" were responsible for a state of "stagnation and of regression which has weakened the efforts of this nation in its fight against communism."

"Moreover, because of your excessive attachment to power, you have indulged in dictatorial practices—preferring the flatteries of sycophants over the advice of honest counsels."

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court ruled constitutional the amendment to the electoral law which Thieu sponsored to restrict the number of presidential candidates drastically. Ky in his letter said the amendment violates the constitution and Thieu four years ago had "ardently opposed" just such restrictions.

"As the country prepares itself for the election," Ky wrote Thieu, "you now silence the opposition and muzzle the press."

The law requires endorsing signatures from 40 National Assemblymen or 100 province councillors for a candidate to enter the presidential race.

APPLE JUICE SAMPLES USED BY GIs ON DRUGS

LONG BINH, Vietnam (UPI) — Some GIs hand in a bottle of apple juice when it comes time for a urinalysis and others pay $100 to a buddy to take their place in line. It is all part of a sort of desperate game between the U.S. military and soldiers undergoing tests for drug addiction before leaving Vietnam.

Doctors say they are not at all sure who is winning.

Capt. John Soyak, 30, of Detroit runs the first stop for GIs being processed to leave Vietnam. His command post is a small wooden shack.

Every soldier from a four-star general on down has to provide a urine sample which is tested for heroin, morphine or opium.

"Let's face it," Soyak said. "Some of these men are desperate and use desperate methods." The room Soyak operates from is equipped with big mirrors to alert medics watching for any sleight-of-hand the GIs might try.

Identify checks are tightened when GIs who were not addicts were found collecting up to $100 to substitute for addict soldiers.

Soldiers also sometimes send the electronic testing machine haywire by handing in bottles of apple juice instead of urine. Others have fooled the test by delaying withdrawal symptoms with barbiturates or the synthetic heroin substitute called methadone long enough to clear opiates from their bodies.

"I haven't seen any guys coming through the line going through withdrawal symptoms," said Robert Burne, 21, a medic from Marion, Ind. He has been assigned to the addiction spotting centre since it opened June 18.

"After a while, though, you can kind of tell those who might be on smack (heroin). They're uptight. They want to talk a lot."

The U.S. command declines to give any indication of how many soldiers have been found to have taken heroin in the 24 to 48 hours before the urinalysis, the period in which it can be detected.

Trimming at the Top

IN THE BROAD PICTURE, THE decision of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. to cut top echelon salaries by up to 10 per cent will have greater psychological impact than economic. The decision, announced by Chairman J. V. Clyne, shows consideration for the feelings of shareholders who have not received their quarterly dividend, and could be a bench mark of sorts when union wage negotiations are resumed.

The action is part of a general trend among senior executives to lower their costs to the industry which is the chief contributor to the provincial economy. Other companies are lowering expenses by forgoing replacement of a number of executives as they retire.

This cut-back at the top underscores the difficulties currently encountered by the forest industries. Those difficulties are not confined to British Columbia, but are perhaps more important here than elsewhere because of provincial dependence on forest products as British Columbia's chief money-maker.

Mr. Clyne points to several factors that have influenced markets and shrunk profits. Prices have been lowered for pulp and, according to him, "the market in Europe is so sloppy it is really hard to say what the prices are."

This was an automatic development when the upward surge in demand for pulp led companies to invest in equipment that is now over-productive. Capacity to supply has outpaced demand for the time being.

Mr. Clyne is nevertheless optimistic about the outlook for newsprint and lumber, expecting better prices for the rest of the year. He also thinks that the North American recession is "bottoming-out" after falling further than expected.

His opinions deserve respect. They must be viewed, however, against established facts in the forest industries. British Columbia has been able to operate on a high-cost basis because of its wealth of raw material, its use of improved technology and employment of skilled workmen. Combined, they gave production an efficiency which kept the industry in a favored competitive position.

Those factors still exist. But, as experts in the field have pointed out on earlier occasions, British Columbia holds no monopoly on supplies of wood, technology or brains capable of producing skilled workmen. Some of the processed and fabricated Japanese wood products now entering British Columbia's domestic market are proof of that truth. Significantly, the imports are being sold at prices, on various items, below those of equivalent British Columbia products.

Beyond that, suppliers of other building materials are moving deeply into markets where lumber once enjoyed high priority, and moving in at a dollar value attractive to purchasers.

These are facts clearly recognized by leaders of British Columbia's forest industries — just as they recognize that some of the projections on which they built capacity to supply the market have proved in error, at least temporarily.

At this date, the need to shave down high-cost production is demonstrated by the earnings cuts of top men in the industry. The basic cost factor should not be ignored when what is hopefully a transient phase in the industry has passed. Competition will still be keen even when the number of house starts in the United States, British Columbia's chief export market, is climbing again.

A Field for Canadians

THE NATIONAL RESEARCH Council is seriously considering moving into the area of plasma technology. Plasma, the most prevalent form of matter in the universe, is electrically charged gas. An ad hoc committee of the NRC was established one year ago to study the possibilities of the plasma scheme and outlined its proposals recently before a regular NRC meeting. A decision is expected this fall.

Canadian science has made considerable strides in plasma research and the proposed scheme would exploit this country's strengths in the field. It would do more than that, however, for it would put to work many young scientists whose creativity is wilting on the vine. In the words of the chairman of the committee investigating plasma possibilities, Dr. H. E. Duckworth, "Our young scientists feel they are the forgotten men in Canada; they need the chance to participate in some clearly-defined purposeful project."

In line with the Senate Science Committee report, the application of research would be stressed. Additionally, industry would be brought into the picture as a financial contributor.

The plasma project would put Canadian expertise to work in an endeavor which would enhance this country's good name in science. It would keep this country and our scientific community in the forefront of an area of enormous possibilities.

Wine for the Young Diner

SPONSORS OF THE MANITOBA bill to permit children under 18 to drink wine or beer in public dining rooms, when accompanied by their parents, no doubt expected conventional objections to the step they were taking. The objections have come. Conscientious critics have taken their stand against making liquor of any type more easily available to the young.

The argument is countered by proponents of the bill with the explanation that it serves only to grant to minors the privilege they would enjoy at home on festive occasions. It is not, they say, a gesture to encourage youngsters to drink hard liquor.

The legislation could, on the other hand, act in the interests of temperance. Children allowed a glass of wine or beer on the occasion of a special dinner "out" should be impressed with the supervision given by their parents. Such beverages would, under the circumstances, lose the flavor of "the forbidden fruit." Conceivably, but by no means certainly, wine with the family at dinner away from home might also bring a more civilized approach to drinking in Canada — a lesson taught by some of the more sophisticated Europeans.

Holes in an Anti-Pollution Bill

By HAROLD GREER

ONTARIO'S long-awaited comprehensive anti-pollution legislation, The Environmental Protection Act, has finally escaped the clutches of the bureaucracy, the cabinet and the Conservative caucus.

Greer

"An environmental Bill of rights for the people of Ontario," proclaimed Premier William Davis on presenting it to the Legislature, which was rather like treasuring the fox after the hounds had finished with it.

Whatever it is, this bill is hardly an environmental Bill of Rights. It is, to be sure, full of anti-pollution edicts, with heavy fines in the event of conviction. But whether the edicts are enforced or not is another matter: The act is also full of discretionary clauses whereby the minister of the environment and sundry officials "may" do this and "may" do that. It also has, in its last provision, the interesting — and new — requirement that no charges of pollution may be laid without the consent of the minister. To label such legislative arbitrariness "an environmental Bill of Rights" requires, to say the least, an over-worked political imagination.

Purpose Excellent

Schematically, the bill is an integration and to some extent a development of portions of existing legislation dealing with air and water pollution, waste management, pesticides and public health, all now to be wrapped up in a new Department of the Environment under Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr. Philosophically — "the purpose of this Act is to provide for the protection and conservation of the natural environment" — it is beyond reproach.

But after that things get very murky indeed.

There is a prohibition, for example, against building anything that may pollute the environment without first having plans approved by the government. But this is not to apply to anything "used in the pursuit of agriculture" — even though, on the record, some of the worst polluters have been found in certain food processing plants.

There is a provision, carried over from existing law, against creating, altering, extending, etc., a waste disposal site or dump without government approval. But the current law says "no person or municipality shall..." The words "or municipality" have been deleted in this bill, even though rural municipal dumps are one of the greatest problems in pollution of the natural environment. There is also a new section which allows the Minister "in the public interest" to exempt private dump operators from the control of municipal by-laws.

Perhaps the greatest flaw in the bill, however, is that almost everything is dependent on government regulation — that is, on orders-in-council which the cabinet may or may not pass after the bill becomes law.

Thus, the key provision of the bill reads: "No person shall deposit in, add to, emit or discharge into the natural environment any contaminant, and no person responsible for a source of contaminant shall permit the addition to, emission or discharge into the natural environment of any contaminant from the source of contaminant, in an amount, concentration or level in excess of that prescribed by the regulations."

Discriminatory?

Since "contaminant" is defined to mean "any solid, liquid, gas, odor, heat, sound, vibration, radiation or combination of any of them present in the natural environment as a result directly or indirectly of the activities of man," it becomes obvious the regulations will either be encyclopedic in scope or so highly selective as to be discriminatory against some polluters and favorable to others.

Add to that a section of the bill which makes it an offence for failing to tell the government "if one causes a pollution 'spill' in excess of the prescribed amount and the whole thing borders on an unenforceable bureaucratic nightmare.

It is, however, an unavoidable nightmare as long as government refuses to take the one step which can get to the heart of the pollution problem — which is to make polluters liable in civil law for damages to the natural environment. This principle is already recognized to some extent in the common law now but it is such a complex matter, and it takes such a long time to get a decision out of the courts, that no great hope can be entertained in that direction. A statutory law which holds persons and corporations responsible for pollution which they cause, so that they can be sued for damages instead of simply being liable to a fine in court, would appear to be necessary.

Test Case

At one time, Mr. Kerr was talking privately about the need for such a law, after mercury was discovered in the St. Clair River system and the Dow Chemical Company of Canada Ltd. admitted most of it had probably leaked from its plant at Sarnia over a long period of time. Under the existing law, Dow could not even be prosecuted for pollution (the mercury was not hurting the water — it was hurting the fish, which got it in the food chain from the river bed, which was not covered by the law). The government is currently suing Dow for damages to the natural environment in a test case which is likely to go on for years.

Under the government's proposed new bill, Dow could presumably be prosecuted — providing the regulations declare mercury to be a contaminant. But Mr. Kerr has stopped far short of the decisive step; the most he has got into his new bill is a section permitting him, "where he is of the opinion that it is in the public interest to do so," to order polluters to repair the injury or damage done by a contaminant to land, water or plant life. Curiously, no mention is made of damage to animal life, although that term is used elsewhere in the bill.

Sizing Up the Mediterranean Balance

By TOM BRADEN

WALTER LIPPMANN once suggested to President Johnson that he make friends with the enemy of his enemy. He was speaking of China and Russia and it was good advice for Vietnam. But it will not work in the Mediterranean where a much simpler lesson must be learned.

For almost without anybody noticing it — as though glancing through a recent family album, you suddenly realized that the faces had changed — the balance of power has changed in the Mediterranean.

The United States Navy no longer controls the sea.

As recently as 1965, the Soviet Union had five ships in the Mediterranean. Today it has 50. The United States in 1965, had 40. It still has 40.

The numbers are not totally revealing because American admirals believe that their 40 are more than a match for Russia's 50. They believe, for example, that if the U.S. had to land Marines in Israel against Soviet naval opposition, it could land Marines in Israel. But it would not be a facedown, as in the Cuban missile crisis, when Soviet ships turned around. It would be a battle, a very big battle.

Naval officers do not like to admit that they no longer control the Mediterranean, and they are proposing a shopping list of items which might restore control. They want a new airplane to replace the present 1957 model. They want anti-submarine ships, nuclear frigates and a 90-knot hydrofoil which would be impervious to torpedoes because its keel doesn't really touch the water. They worry about the fact that Russia has more submarines in the Mediterranean than does the United States — not as good submarines but more.

Desire for Control

The trouble with the Navy's shopping list is that even if the U.S. buys all of it — and probably ought to buy a great deal of it — it will not turn back the years. Russian admirals undoubtedly have their shopping list, too. The American Navy wants to control the sea; the Russian navy wants to prevent the U.S. from controlling the sea. The Russian objective is easier to gain, and probably less expensive.

So the lesson to be learned is that for the foreseeable future, peace-keeping in the Mediterranean will have to be accomplished by agreement between the two major powers, or by the acquiescence of one when the other thinks its vital interest are threatened. This is the reality behind President Nixon's recent suggestion that the two powers cooperate in enforcing any Egyptian-Israeli settlement. The United States can no longer act on its own.

Restraining Element

This is not necessarily a great tragedy. It will serve to prevent the United States from throwing its weight around on occasions when it ought not to do so. Jingoists at home will have to learn to live with the fact that the United States can no longer dismiss governments or keep them in power by showing the flag offshore. Nor can it land in Lebanon as it did in 1958 in the absolute certainty that nobody will try to stop it.

But the new situation in the Mediterranean — truly reflective of the nuclear balance in the world as a whole — gives added weight to the Navy's requests for more ships and more modern ones. The Russians are now building at a much greater rate than the Americans who would probably not want to see the power balance change further.

It might be essential to the United States to keep oil flowing to Western European allies. It might be essential to land forces in Israel. The new balance of power in the Mediterranean will require a temperateness of conduct the United States has not always shown in the past. Americans will have to learn to ask themselves, "What are Russia's interests?"

But the new balance also requires that the United States keep its Navy at such a level that the Soviet Union will not be able to avoid asking itself, "What are the interests of the United States?" (Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times.)

The Victoria Spirit

My wife and I came to live here just three weeks ago and we are truly taken with your fair city.

While running around looking for items for our home, we answered an ad for a chest of drawers for sale at Maplewood Ave. We drove there, and as I reversed my Datsun on the shoulder of the road, I dropped into a narrow ditch obscured by grass, my car heeling over almost on its side. (City Engineer please note.) As we decided on the chest, another party came to look at it. The gentleman seeing my predicament, and hearing me ask for a tow truck, immediately offered to help get it out, and told me to cancel the truck. He and his son together with a neighbour there, worked hard and after 15 minutes my car was back on the road. I did not get their names, but would like to thank them through you.

We were at a loss as to how to get our chest delivered, until one of our neighbours, who at this point were complete strangers, phoned a friend who had a small van, and he came the next evening with another pal, and they both brought the chest here for us. In all these cases, no one would take any reward for their help, and if this is an example of Victoria, I feel assured that our move here was indeed fortunate. We, too, will help whenever we get our chance. — Katherine and Griff Owens, 1032 Vancouver.

Tired of Uvic Squabble

I for one am tired of hearing about "tenure." I am tired of hearing arrogant and immature professors babble and blather on about how they insist that the University of Victoria should be administered — for their own particular convenience and security. I am also tired of university politics.

Having always disliked intensely the idea and philosophy of rule by minority, and especially a noisy minority, I am becoming weary of seeing my hard-earned tax dollar being frittered away to satisfy the egos of a few individuals who should be told once and for all that if the hired help does not suit the hirer — he will be fired.

It may well be that Canada stands for something a little more moderate and a little less hopeless than the society presently decaying below the border, and it seems to me that if we are to hold on to the tenuous thread of sanity the over-taxed citizens of British Columbia should strike now. We should call a strike against those universities that spend hundreds and thousands of dollars annually for committees of enquiries, which appear to dignify a radical minority by providing them with a forum through which they can expound their infantile philosophies of dissent, disruption and disorder. — Allan M. Purdy, 1620 Michelle.

Breathing Spell

For once I find myself in agreement with Claude Ryan although for reasons opposite to those expressed by him in the July 8 article in the Times. He denounces the Victoria Charter on the grounds that Quebec does not get enough, while my objection to it is that Canada loses too much.

It may not be generally realized that the Canadian Constitutional Charter, 1971 — to use its official title — consists of ten parts, 61 articles and four pages listing deletions from the BNA Act. To most of this no exception can be taken but there are several items in it dangerous to the future of our country. Hence it was with relief that I heard Mr. Bourassa's "No." True, we may end up with something still worse but at least it gives a breathing space in which to think things over. — F. L. P. Anderson, 1138 Leonard.

Yugoslavia: Socialism With Difference

By WILLIAM GUTTMANN
The London Observer

"If you want to see a socialist society you'd have done better to stay in England, rather than come to Yugoslavia," said a British expatriate who has made his home in Dubrovnik, the beautiful city on the Dalmatian coast.

It was, of course, a joke; for although in Yugoslavia it is not the state which directly controls the economic and social life of the nation as it does in the Soviet Union and other Communist States of Eastern Europe, nevertheless the means of production and distribution, the commercial and industrial enterprises and other organizations are more or less autonomously managed by the very people who work in them. And this so-called "social self-management" clearly presents a form of enlightened socialism with a strong flavor of democracy.

Consumer Society

Yet the ordinary day-to-day life of the people seems to be the visiting stranger permeated by most of the features one can find in the capitalist states of the West. There is to all appearances the consumer society and the market economy.

The producers compete with each other for customers, and the consumer is attracted by an ample supply of goods, both luxury and necessity, to spend more and earn more in order to satisfy desires stimulated by familiar marketing methods.

Money is not a dirty word and to make more of it than the next fellow, and — equality or no equality — to be richer than he is, seems to be considered anything but anti-social or disgraceful.

Gone are the bad old days when the visitor from abroad would delight his local friends with a gift of a reel of cotton or a ball-pen, and when for an old typewriter he could purchase untold services and quantities of those selected goods that were available locally. People are not ashamed to accept, or even mildly to solicit, a tip or to make a little extra profit.

But the greatest surprise is the advertising. There is plenty of it, technically, as good as in the West. The range of advertised goods and services is wide. Banking, insurance, convenience foods, household goods of all kinds, electrical appliances, furniture, cosmetics of different brands compete with each other.

Skol lager beer and Schweppes tonic water, both made locally, were minor but impressive examples of the official encouragement given to foreign investors and of the way the socialist state has come to terms with capitalist ways.

The shops offer goods of all descriptions and acceptable quality; and a modern superstore, with a very pleasant roof garden restaurant, could hold its own in any Western town of comparable size (under 30,000 inhabitants). Particularly attractive and richly supplied are food shops, and here cleanliness and hygiene are remarkable, evidence of a general attitude exemplified by the scrupulously clean and litter-free streets and alleyways. Prices are, on average, comparable to those prevailing in Western Europe.

Great Spenders

But can the people afford to buy all the good things on offer? For earnings, on the whole, compare unfavourably with Western standards. Crowds of people in the shops, in the many cafes, taverns and restaurants (by no means all foreign tourists) may be deceptive.

The inhabitants of Dubrovnik, I was told, are great spenders, rather improvident and inclined to part with the last dinar in their pocket. Many earn good wages and salaries; but many more earn little, and there is at the moment in Yugoslavia a large army of unemployed who suffer hardships.

For the ordinary people the conditions which decide whether a family is reasonably off or poor are oddly reminiscent of what often happens in our capitalist world: if both husband and wife are working and have a home of their own, then, generally speaking, it is not difficult for them to make ends meet.

But if there is only one wage earner in the family; if the wife has to look after small children and cannot earn; if they have no home of their own and have to frequently pay to pay extortionate rents for accommodation obtained privately — then life is difficult.

To obtain accommodation through the enterprise which employs him, a man has to wait sometimes two to eight years, I was told. When a home becomes available the firm allocates it to the worker, who has to continue with his firm for an agreed length of time.

Thus, loyalty to one's place of work is essential for a man's well-being. But this will not prevent him from occasionally making an extra dinar on the side, during his working day.

An important source of income is the earnings of masses of Yugoslavs who, forced by unemployment at home and with the blessing of the authorities, have gone to work abroad, and either send money home or bring their savings back after long absences.

German Hate Gone

Western Germany, with its high wages, is particularly attractive. There is no discernible animosity against the once-hated enemy, and German goods, German visitors and the German language are conspicuous everywhere.

Germans head the list of foreign visitors to the country, for which tourism is now the greatest source of foreign currency.

English is still the first foreign language taught in the schools and its importance is paramount; but as the second language, where the pupil can choose, German, French or Russian, German seems to be the hot favorite on account of its growing usefulness.

The narrow and prosperous Dalmatian strip, although stretching far south, belongs politically to Yugoslavia's mainly northern component republic of Croatia and, as in many other parts of the world, the north is more go-ahead, open-minded, industrious, progressive and therefore richer than the south.

Zagreb, the regional capital, is to the national capital, Belgrade, what Milan is to Rome. This applies to Dalmatia, too, with its great moneyspinner, tourism.

I found interesting the resentment of a man in the street. "Here we are," he said "working hard and creating wealth — and the money goes to Belgrade."

He expressed the longing of his hardworking and ambitious fellow-workers to enjoy individually the rewards of their efforts and to have the good things in life rather than sharing them with their compatriots elsewhere.

This attitude is the principal, though by no means the only, ingredient of Yugoslavia's central problem: the diversities and jealousies among the various nationalities and communities that make up the country and threaten its unity.

NOT EVERYTHING is up to date yet in Yugoslavia. Along road between Maribor and Zagreb women look up from washing beside village stream.

Pepin Moves Up Fast In Liberal Sweepstake

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Jean-Luc Pepin was interviewed last week on the CBC program Encounter. The minister of industry, trade and commerce was quick, adroit, and unfurling as he countered doubts and problems about Canada's developing love affair with China.

He was not afraid to emphasize "the bucks" in prospect in this warm, new relationship. He was pleasantly informal and unpretentious about his encounters in China during his recent trade mission.

At the program's end, he said he could wait to be external affairs minister and that he didn't think of himself as having the qualities needed to be prime minister.

A few days ago, Arthur Blakely, the veteran Montreal Gazette pundit in the Press Gallery, described Mr. Pepin as "the most underrated Cabinet minister" and noted: "There is an interesting tendency in high circles here to play down, ever so gently, Mr. Pepin's role in Peking."

Blakely says Mr. Pepin "has never really had access to the power levers, as a member of the Trudeau Cabinet." He isn't close to the Prime Minister. "There has never been a place of substance for him in the power structure."

Blakely doesn't mention it, perhaps he hasn't heard it — but there are a few Liberals in Ottawa who have come to recognize Mr. Pepin's attractiveness and skills and who wonder "whether we haven't picked the wrong French-Canadian as leader."

Trudeau has almost no trace of a French accent in using English; Mr. Pepin has, but it is slight. In scope of vocabulary and as an orator in English, he is much better than the prime minister. Further, he has a livelier sense of humor. He is a kiddier, not a needler. He is also a kind man. When he knocks someone down verbally, as he did Ron Collier on Encounter, he comes back and gently away any hurt.

The opinion has never faded away in Ottawa that Trudeau may leave politics abruptly — if his policies seem a failure, or if he loses a lot of ridings in the next election. The view has had a resurgence lately, as I mentioned several times in April and May. It's not just a journalistic dream, but a liberal practice.

Lately, MPs and party officials have been checking possible heirs-apparent to Trudeau. It became quite a common bull-session topic after Eric Kierans pulled out of the cabinet.

Most surveys run through the cabinet rank. There are no Liberal provincial premiers, or outside strong-men, who seem worth consideration. The speculators usually end with a short list of five names.

In the winnowing process, some of the younger, abler men are counted out because of supposed flaws. For example, Bob Andras — neither confident nor tough enough; Ron Bastford — over-bumptious; Brice Mackasey — healthy; John Munro — too busy, busy, in too many directions; Otto Lang — cold, and shaky at home; Jean Chretien — needs a leader himself.

The short list has John Turner, Don Jamieson, Donald Macdonald, Jack Davis and Jean-Luc Pepin. Each man has a major department, although Mr. Macdonald's, defence, seems a waning one.

Macdonald was the favorite three years ago in "if the PM has a heart attack" musings, but his reputation for lack of diplomacy and a surfeit of arrogance acquired when he was House leader has knocked him down the ranks, although no one forgets his ambition, brains and energy.

Jack Davis is so straightforward and mild that his reputation has made him too practical and unpolitical to be prime minister, even though business and industry might find him the most attractive possibility.

Don Jamieson is incorrigibly old-fashioned in his gift of the gab and his homely ways. But he's busy, a schemer in the Pickersgill tradition, and very popular with MPs and interest groups who find him a good listener and quick to help when he can, and when he can't, to be nice about it.

John Turner and Jean-Luc Pepin are moving to the top of the short list. Each has concentrated hard on his own department and exploited its possibilities. Neither man makes many mistakes, especially in the House. Each is physically strong and durable, and very articulate in both languages.

The contrasts between them, of course, are substantial. Turner is wound up a lot tighter. He seems so obviously more ambitious, even tricky. Pepin may be a shade slower mentally, but he is also much less sensitive, personally. Turner is seen as having taken more initiative on his own as minister. Mr. Pepin as operating more within the advisory framework of his top officials.

Only Turner, of the five possible successors, was a competitor against Trudeau in the 1968 leadership convention. Not a little because of that, he has probably more party enemies than any others in the quintet, with the possible exception of Mr. Macdonald.

It may seem wildly improbable to you, but if there should be a leadership convention in the next two years, the odds are strong it would be one of these five, most likely Turner or Pepin.

You ask: What about the other also-rans from the 1968 race? J. H. Greene? Well... Allan MacEachern? Gone to ground. Paul Martin? Well... Robert Winters is dead. Eric Kierans and Paul Hellyer are politically dead.

What Happened to Brave New World?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

As Ottawa continues to grope its way toward a new arrangement of family allowance payments, no one can be really sure where the plan will come to rest. The churning now going on, however, suggests it will be some distance removed from the traditional concept of the baby bonus.

This never was a welfare scheme, being mailed as gladly to the home of a millionaire as to the home of an unemployed laborer. It had much less to do with income security than with political job security, and its worst feature was its irreversibility.

So what is going on now? A new plan was outlined in last November's government white paper on income security. It called for replacement of the old scheme by a selective plan that would end the payment of allowances where family gross income exceeded $10,000.

One could be charitable and say that this was a step in the right direction since it moved toward concentrating family allowance payments where they would do the most good. (Families with incomes of up to $4,500 a year would get at least double the present benefits.) Allowances would be from $16 down to $5 a month for each child, depending on income.

A fairly predictable protest arose that the arbitrary cutoff would be unfair to large families whose incomes were only slightly over $10,000. The massive rethinking which followed this is reported to have produced a new plan — one in which family size would dictate the cutoff point. For example, a family with four children would be permitted to go to $10,770; and one with seven children could earn up to $12,120 before losing allowances.

Again one could acknowledge that an effort was being made to design an equitable system; one in which allowance payments would be tailored to need and/or family size. Will it please the Canadian electorate as a whole? Will it meet provincial aspirations?

Whether the newest notion is good or bad, it may well induce a weary feeling in those who had allowed themselves to believe that a brave new world of income security was upon us; a new world in which, perhaps, the present vast number of social welfare outlets would be reduced in number — harnessed and coordinated in a simplified form capable of being implemented with dignity and efficiency.

Perhaps we are simply failing to see the latest adjustment in family allowances as a minuscule part of the grand plan, but it does convey the impression of tinkering.

Auto Restyling Trust Violation?

By BRADFORD C. SNELL
The Nation

Last year the American automobile killed 56,000 motorists and injured millions more. It accounts for 60 per cent of the nation's air pollution. Twenty million rusting, abandoned cars disfigure the countryside.

Safe, pollution-free, more durable automobiles are desperately needed. They have already been built, but the Big Three car manufacturers refuse to produce them. And those firms willing to produce them are barred from the industry by the Big Three's annual restyling practices.

Annual change in the style of automobiles, like the seasonal variation in women's fashions, has become an accepted way of life in the U.S. Nevertheless, it may violate the federal antitrust laws.

Unlike design changes in women's fashions, automobile restyling is a complex, prohibitively expensive process. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler spend more than $1.5 billion each year to change the appearance of their models.

Moreover, they spend hundreds of millions in advertising to convince motorists that the cars which only a year ago were hailed as the ultimate in design and engineering are suddenly obsolete.

For nearly fifty years, these three firms have engaged in annual restyling. The formidable costs involved eliminated almost 100 smaller competitors and now prevent new companies from entering the industry. As a result, the Big Three today account 97 per cent of automobile production in the United States.

Annual restyling creates insurmountable barriers to entry by new firms by requiring investments of nearly $1 billion in parts and distribution facilities and in plants with high output capacities.

Consequently, economists conclude that the idea of new domestic entry into this industry seems "preposterous." No manufacturer has entered and survived in the industry since 1923, the year GM introduced annual style changes.

GM, Ford and Chrysler deny that there are entry barriers, citing the recent increase in imported car sales. But foreign producers such as Volkswagen and Toyota rely on large-scale economies abroad and enormous worldwide sales to support their gradual expansion into the American market.

Alternatively, the Big Three argue that style changes are "an example of competitive response to customer demand." But what about the increasing proportion of motorists who prefer performance (safety, decreased pollution, durability) to restyling? Since 1968, the Big Three have spent each year nearly $200 per car for restyling. The value of performance improvements, as measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has increased less than $6 per automobile each year.

Style change has never been attacked under the anti-trust laws, but it seems to be the type of "concentration-increasing practice which Congress sought to prohibit when it passed Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act in 1914.

To halt a widespread and growing concentration in industry, Congress empowered the FTC under that section to strike down "unfair practices" which suppressed competition by eliminating actual and potential competitors. Arguably, annual restyling is conduct of this variety.

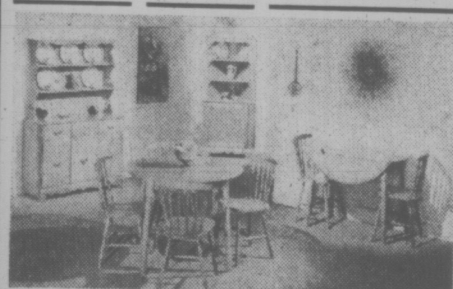

If the FTC sues the Big Three, and wins, it could break these giant corporations into at least forty efficient producers. The resulting competition among that many firms could provide consumers with cars better suited for people and their environment. It could be the last chance for the American automobile.

Morocco Coup Motives a Mystery

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
RABAT (AP)—Many questions are unanswered in the wake of the attempted coup in Morocco and the execution of its ring-leaders.
 Mystery still shrouds the motives of the leaders of the rebellion and why they spared the life of King Hassan II, a conservative, pro-Western monarch and one of the leading moderates in the Arab world.
 The rebels announced a "people's revolutionary committee" and proclaimed a regime of Libyan-style socialism. Yet most of the leaders were millionaires steeped in the capitalist way of life.
 Was the coup just an attempt to seize power and set up a military dictatorship, or was it motivated by ideological considerations?
 The 12 men named as leaders of the coup are all dead, 10 executed by firing squad Tuesday and two killed during the attack on the king's summer palace Saturday. The Associated Press reports that some of the ring-leaders were executed Monday proved to be erroneous. These rebels were among the elite of Morocco's army leaders, all long regarded as devoted to the king.
 Hundreds of such men remain the backbone of Hassan's regime. Were some of them secret sympathizers with the coup? And will the new military security tribunal established after the coup carry out a sweeping purge of the army?
 The rebels had a "death list" and systematically executed many of the king's closest advisers. Why, then, did they fail to kill the king or his strongman interior minister, Mohammed Oufkir, who were both at their mercy.

Police Seek Reason In Double Slaying

NEVADA CITY, Calif. (AP)—Authorities in the Sierra foothills searched today for a suspect and motive in the savage slaying of two persons and the wounding of three others at a riverbank campground south of Nevada City.
 "We really don't know who we're looking for," Sheriff Wayne Brown said after he surveyed the campsite overlooking the pebble-strewn beach at a bend in the Bear River.
 He talked with the husbands of two victims and said: "They can't throw any light on the matter. They're just as puzzled as we are."
 The two persons slain by the man Brown described as "a maniacal attacker wielding a heavy, sharp weapon" were found about 30 feet apart.
 One was Donna Fitzhugh, who with her husband and four children moved from Ontario, Calif., in mid-June. The other was Jimen Satan, 29, of nearby Weimar who had set up a semi-permanent camp in a tarpaulin-covered camper he had built on a flatbed truck.
 Critically injured was Martha Marie Parker, 25, of Ontario, who underwent extensive surgery at Sacramento Medical Centre for head wounds.
 Injured less seriously were Kenneth Garbe, 20, of Applegate in neighboring Placer County, and his wife Jean, 23.
 Brown said the killer slipped into the campground about 11 p.m. Monday.
 He first confronted the Barges at their tent.
 "This guy threw open the flap and said 'Hi there,' that's all I remember him saying," Garbe said. "He was grinning, sort of growling."
 Garbe said the attacker swung at his wife with what appeared to be a sickle. He and the attacker struggled and "then the guy ran away from the tent."
 Garbe said he saw the man attacking Satan and the other two women at the next tent about 30 feet away.
 "GUY SWINGING"
 "There was a light in the tent. I saw this guy swinging at everybody in sight."
 Garbe said he heard three shots, apparently fired by Satan, whose holster was empty although it held a pistol earlier Monday.
 Brown said the attacker apparently fled with Satan's pistol, a .41-calibre magnum revolver. Dave Parker and Sam Fitzhugh, husbands of the victims, had gone to nearby Greenhorn Creek to prospect for gold.
 The two, each about 30, drove back to the campground late Tuesday afternoon where a deputy told them the children were all right but "an accident" had happened to their wives.
 Mrs. Fitzhugh was Parker's sister.

Cheating Officials

PARIS (Reuters)—A number of French government officials were reprimanded for cheating on trips overseas. The annual report of the court of accounts, France's watchdog on spending, said some unnamed officials entitled to travel first-class flew tourist class instead and then collected the price difference from the airlines.

The Libyan government radio broadcast a triumphant salute to the coup when it had barely begun. Did the Libyan revolutionary leaders have advance notice of the plot?
 The Moroccan news agency published a list of nine of the ring-leaders, along with their property holdings. They were headed by Gen. Mohamed Medbouh, who was killed by his own men—accidentally, King Hassan said later—during the attack on the palace.
 Medbouh, 44, director of the king's personal military staff, owned "farms and villages throughout the kingdom," the news agency said.
 Gen. Amahrahe Mustapha, 48, director of military training, owned two villas, a country estate and an apartment in Paris.
 Gen. Khiairi Bougrine, 47, commander of the Fez-Taza military region, owned a seaside villa and two farms.
 Gen. Abderrahmane Habibi, 48, commander of the Marrakech military region, owned five villas and a farm.
 Gen. Ahahzoun Hamou, 56, commander of the Rabat military region, and Col. Fenniri of the general staff were both large landowners.
 So was Col. Kebir Belabsir, 54, who owned an agricultural estate of several thousand acres.
 Lt.-Col. Ben Brahim owned an elegant cafe in Rabat, a farm and several villas.
 Lt.-Col. Mohamed Ababou, commander of the non-commissioned officers' school whose cadets were the shock troops of the revolt, owned two villas, a farm, a tea room and a hotel.
 What kind of revolution did these men contemplate?
 Hassan presided over a cabinet meeting Tuesday night which ordered a complete inventory of the conspirators' property. They presumably will be confiscated to help pay compensation to the families of victims of the attempted coup.
 The information ministry said 92 persons were killed and 138 wounded by the mutineers in the attack on the king's palace while 400 guests were being entertained at a party marking Hassan's 42nd birthday.
 No final toll was issued for the mutineers but latest official reports Sunday spoke of 158 killed and 650 wounded.

CANADIAN OIL LINE SEEN AS 'LEAST DANGEROUS'

EDMONTON (CP)—An ecologist feels there is little doubt that a pipeline will be built through the Canadian North from Alaska.
 "We can only hope to minimize the ill effects," said Dr. Robert M. Strang, a research scientist with the Canadian forestry service.
 Dr. Strang, recently transferred to Edmonton from the Maritimes, said in an interview that the federal government "has to make sure the construction companies do what they're told."
 Dr. Strang said there are three possible routes for a pipeline from the North Slope of Alaska:

1. Through Alaska to Valdez from where tankers would transport the oil to Seattle.
2. Along the Alaskan coast, cutting south to avoid a U.S. federal reserve, through Old Crow Flats in the Yukon, east to Arctic Red River on the Mackenzie River and up the Mackenzie Valley to Edmonton.
3. South through the Yukon and through the interior of British Columbia to Fort Nelson, B.C.

what I'm told, would be the least dangerous, ecologically," he said.
 "The route to Valdez through Alaska is enormously risky."
 "Valdez is in an earthquake zone, and however efficiently the pipeline is constructed it's still a very unsafe proposition."
 Dr. Strang added:
 "There is a fourth alternative—to leave the oil where it is."
 "Perhaps the United States should get away from their internal combustion syndrome."

From a Classroom To a New Morality

The report that there were more than 2,800 "therapeutic" abortions in British Columbia hospitals in the first five months of this year—and who knows how many in the old-fashioned, illegal, butcher style—is a reminder once more of the accumulating tragedy that results from the lack of a realistic program of sex education in the schools of this province.

Now that Education Minister Donald Broder has righteously snipped the chapters on sex from a new Family Life course—an operation that, sad to say, seems not to have stirred public opinion in the slightest—I am suggesting that he be sent to Sweden for a month to see for himself what might be accomplished by a common-sense acknowledgment that the state must accept its responsibility.

In Sweden, as noted here Monday, that acceptance was imposed upon the government 30-odd years ago by the pressure of educators who saw unwanted pregnancies among their students as a denial of the right to an education and by mothers determined that their daughters would not be the innocent victims of ignorance in the realities of sex and contraception.

That was the basic motivation in the early '40s, just as it is now. A visitor to Stockholm today will still see those gigantic posters showing a young Swedish couple and the message: "Barn? Javisst—men när vi själva vill!" A baby, yes—but when we want one!

A deeper motivation by these proud, assertive and independent women was a kind of ultimate emancipation—a genuine equality of sexual relations. That, too, has been a revolutionary victory that seems an all but impossible dream in this part of the world.

The Swedes had a head start, it's true. For better than 100 years Swedish women have had the vote. For 50 years the marriage code has so meticulously defined the legal equality of husband and wife that housework is regarded as "a financial contribution."

But the militant feminist movement that first demanded sex education in the schools has gone far beyond the simple proposition of overthrowing a patriarchal system. Its result has been to free women entirely from servility in sexual behavior.

A Canadian reporter covering that story invariably finds it a two-stage discovery. First, there is the startling discovery of the intensive instruction in the schools on everything relating to sex and particularly on methods of contraception. Secondly, there is the discovery, outside the schools, of a continuing dialogue and search for concepts of morality, within marriage and outside it, always with the final goal that women shall be as free as men, that the sex drive of the woman is to be recognized as no weaker or in less need of satisfaction than the man's.

One of Stockholm's women doctors who lectures frequently in the high schools explained it to me in these terms:

"We are all but free of the double standard that, in the past, so often demanded chastity or frigidity for women. Mature sexuality for the Swedish woman, through education, means that she is being allowed to cope with sexual relationships, as with other responsibilities, without the inhibiting, over-protective morality of the past."

In her own home, this vibrant, attractive woman, happily married for 18 years to a university lecturer, lives to the new code.

"No aspect of our sexual relations is sacrosanct between us," she told me. "We treat each other with absolute honesty. No couple can have satisfactory, harmonious sex relations without telling each other everything. That begins with knowledge. It must be entirely co-operative. When the occasion arises that it is the wife who desires relations then she must feel free to take the initiative."

Such women, the Canadian finds, often seem contemptuous or pitying in talking of our standards.

Dr. Maj-Britt Bergstrom-Walan, a 46-year-old psychologist and author of many of the texts used in sex courses in the schools, told me of a lecture tour she'd made to these shores:

"I'm afraid I shocked the Canadian women when I spoke of our sexual freedom. Their problems, in fact, are no different from those of Swedish women, but they are still hiding them. Their moral values are still imposed by men. Sexually, they are not free. You badly need a bolder program in sex education in your schools if your women of the next generation are to be mature. More importantly you need an immediate program for adults."

Again, a 28-year-old graduate in sociology at the University of Stockholm, recalling her impressions of a North American tour:

"Women are taken, willingly or not, by men in the United States and Canada. Your men rarely understand the needs of women. They are inept, egoistic lovers. But it is the fault of your women for not insisting on equality and honesty. The teasing American woman, the woman who so often uses sex as a gift or a weapon, who accepts frustration rather than hurt the male vanity, is morally indefensible."

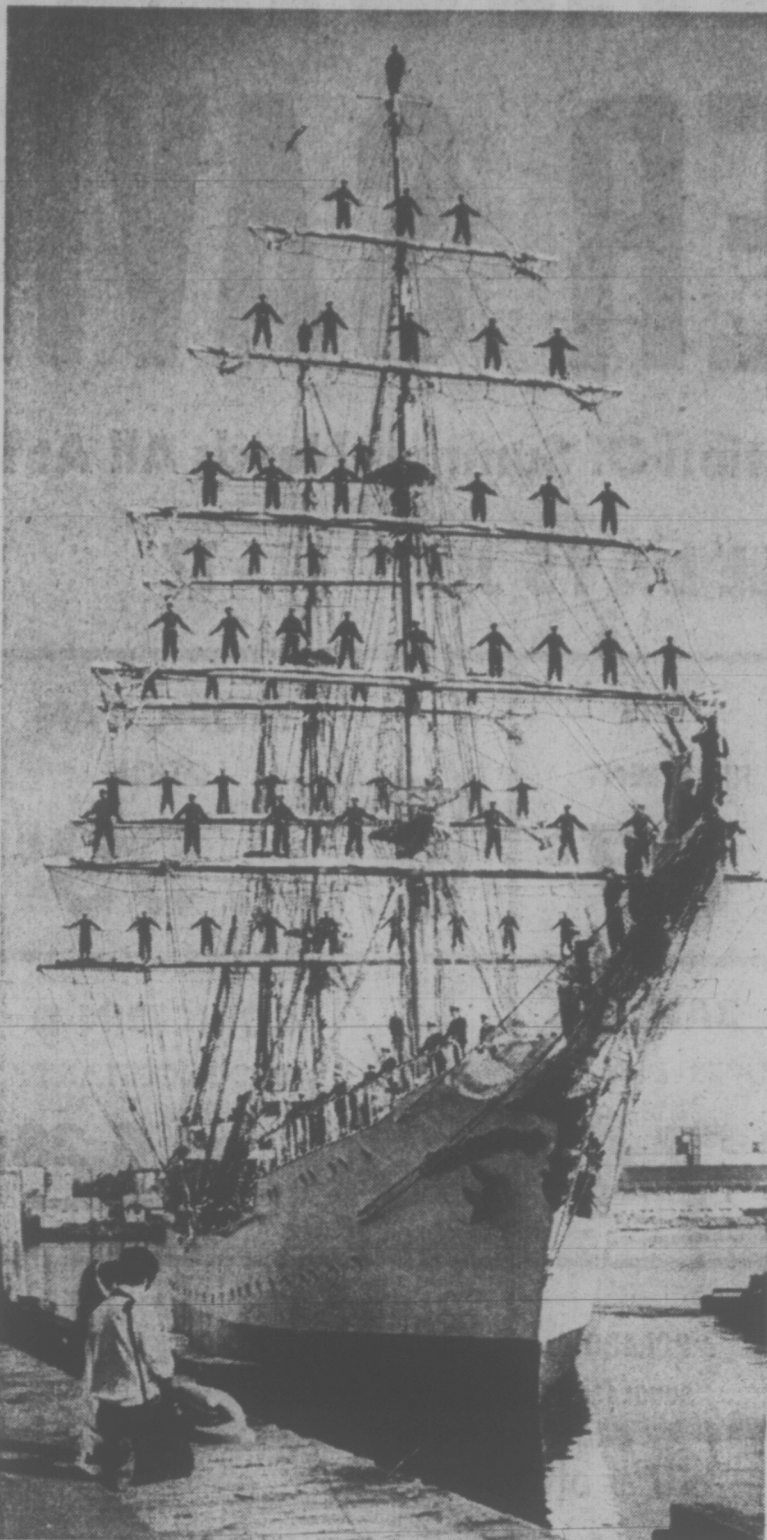

That two-stage discovery is perhaps best summarized in the constitution of the National Association for Sex Education, a private organization financed largely by trade union contributions.

When it was founded the aim was a very simple one: "to make a reality of the conviction that individual health and happiness depends on the freedom to have children only when they are wanted."

Today, nearly 40 years later, its role has been significantly broadened to include "education for harmonious sexual relations, greater candor and knowledge and open-mindedness."

A visit to Sweden by Donald Broder would not be for the purpose of exploring this remarkable transition, but for the more elementary discovery of what can be done in a very practical, logical way to prepare our children for their adult lives. Our need is as simple as it was in Sweden 30 years ago. It is to take sex education off the streets, away from the bumbling, ill-informed parents who simply do not know what it is all about, away from the exploitive, infantile magazines such as Playboy, away from the tragedy of the abortion mills.

If, in the process, the minister of education could be open-minded enough to see the longer-term results, the evolving of a society totally refreshing and decent in its morality, and its insistence that women be more than merely second-class citizens, then we might begin, at last, to start catching up.

Expansion at Present Site Likely for St. Joseph's

A source close to the prolonged dispute over expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital said today there are strong indications land will be bought alongside the hospital for expansion.

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said today he can't understand why a road extension proposed alongside the hospital should interfere with its development.

Dr. Gordon Lott said many major hospitals in Canada operate efficiently beside major thoroughfares. An example: the Toronto General, the Sick Children's Hospital and Mount Sinai, all flanking busy University Avenue in Toronto.

Commenting on the long-drawn dispute over land and road which has delayed expansion of St. Joseph's, Lott said Jim Cumming, chairman of the Capital regional hospital board, presents a misleading picture when he contrasts costs and amounts of land involved in the site alongside the hospital and a proposed site in View Royal.

If expansion takes place beside the hospital, the Sisters of St. Ann's gift of their equity in St. Joseph's, estimated at $4 million, and the land the hospital stands on must be taken into account.

Newly-renovated operating rooms and X-ray facilities and a new unit for treating burn victims are other assets to be weighed in favor of expansion on the current site, he said.

And among the most important reasons already noted by doctors on staff is that the vast majority of patients at St. Joseph's come from the immediate area.

In the prolonged dispute over dollars and cents, bricks and mortar, patients and staff at the hospital have been lost sight of, said Lott.

The issue is really about hospital beds, and it makes more sense to bring St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee Hospitals up to proposed capacities of 650 beds each before embarking on a third hospital.

IT WAS A LONG TIME coming, and maybe it won't last, but let us be grateful for present mercies. Finally it's summer. The sky is blue, the temperature and the barometeric reading have climbed. The sun, for which we'd about given up hope, has returned—and what a difference its welcome presence makes!

We need the sun. Denied it for too long, I become gloomy, edgy, and inclined to growl without provocation. The earth needs it, too.

Sogginess departs. The lawn grass is a full shade greener. And though our garden kept on growing through cloudy weeks, it has picked up its heels remarkably these last few days.

Cherries that made slow progress are plumping out and coloring nicely. Late-planted carrots have added half an inch to their lacy tops and our baker's dozen of Saltspring Sunrise tomato plants have decided to put out their yellow blossoms.

A garden needs water. That can be supplied from a hose. But it must also have sunshine, and that's a commodity for which no artificial substitute will serve.

For lack of sunlight, the Livingstone daisies that Win decided to try this year refused to co-operate. They remained discouraged little clumps of red leaves until the sun all glorious blessed them. Then, like magic, their buds opened into flowers that could have been cut from a child's picture-book, so neat and prim their circlets of stiff-looking petals.

Our cat feels the difference. She spends less time sleeping and more in tigerish prowling. On the first day of sunshine, we found her looking up

Futile to Go On So Rent Board Quits Until Fall

The Rental Accommodation Advisory Board adjourned for the summer Tuesday after its chairman claimed the board's "non-status" made it futile to continue.

The chairman, Bill Tindall, made the comments after Mayor Courtney Haddock, who was scheduled to attend the meeting with a city counter-proposal to the board's demand for a bylaw to give it legal and fiscal status, failed to attend because of illness.

Ald. Robert Baird, council's representative on the board, also did not attend.

Tindall said he would prepare cost estimates on the board's operation to present to the city in September, along with a renewed request for an appropriate bylaw.

The board's grievance subcommittee reported handling 114 calls from tenants in the past two weeks. Chairman Jack Vaio reported one written complaint was being dealt with, involving a $10 security deposit claimed owing by a landlord to an elderly former tenant.

Vaio said he had been unable so far to contact the landlord to "get his side of the story."

CAN'T SEE FILES

After the meeting, representatives of the Capital Region Tenants' Association criticized the board for its apparent failure to accomplish anything. The CRTA representative on the board is George Dawson, and another half-dozen members attended as observers.

The association was angry that Dawson, the only board member representing the rights of tenants, has not been admitted to the grievance subcommittee and is not allowed to see grievance files.

They said an amendment to a CRTA brief which recommended Dawson be placed on the subcommittee has been "received and filed" by the board.

CRTA president Clara Dawson also charged that a brochure planned by the board for distribution to tenants—to be paid for by the city—was an attempt at "brainwashing."

She said the wording and content of the brochure were such that it attempted to nullify the basic tenant rights contained in the Landlord and Tenant Act passed in 1970.

"We're sick about the callous, cavalier attitude of this board," said CRTA officer Ann Tarasoff, "but if we are to accomplish anything in tenant reform we've got to start somewhere."

UNIONIST CRITICAL

Non-Union Bread Prices Rise by Two Cents a Loaf

The price of bread from non-union bakeries has gone up two cents in Victoria.

The increase follows the lead of large Vancouver bread companies.

Unsalted loaves now cost 28 cents, sliced white 29 cents and fancy (e.g. French) loaves 30 cents. Buns have gone from 45 to 49 cents a dozen.

Increased wholesale bread prices by McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. and Weston Bakeries Ltd. were brought on by a recent wage settlement. McGavin's vice-president of sale C. R. Murphy said Tuesday.

"Our prices went up all over B.C. last week," Murphy said.

He was referring to a June 1 settlement between bread firms and the Bakery and Confectionary Workers' International Union, representing 700 Lower Mainland and Island bakers. The settlement gave the bakers a $17.50 wage increase on the previous weekly base of $172.50. They'll get another $17.50 effective June 1, 1972.

McGavin bread is baked in Nanaimo and delivered to Victoria. Weston bread comes from Vancouver.

"We've never seen their books, so we don't know whether the increase was justified," said Mel Kemmis, secretary of the western Canada council of the Bakery and Confectionary Workers. Kemmis said non-union shops which raised bread prices have taken advantage of action by the big firms because they don't have to give their employees benefits comparable to those won by the union.

He claimed this was certainly true of McDonald's Bakery Ltd., the largest local bread producer.

McDonald's Bakery president John L. McDonald said his labor costs aren't as high as for the union companies, but pointed out productivity isn't as high either because the shop is only semi-automated.

"What happens is the price of bread goes up every two years, so everybody suffers through until the chain bakeries raise their prices," McDonald said.

Doug Brock, supervisor of Brodie's Bakery which employs 22 people in two stores, admitted small, independent operators can't pay wages equivalent to those won by the union.

But he said small bakeries and large bread companies are really two different kinds of industry, and it wouldn't be fair to make direct comparisons.

"What people don't understand is that those big bakeries turn out bread with machines, whereas we do it by hand," Brock said.

Blood Shortage Called Critical

A traditional drop in blood donors during the summer holiday period has produced a critical blood shortage which could lead to cancelling operations.

Charles MacNeill, supervisor of the Victoria Red Cross blood donor panel, said today that another poor turnout for next week's three-day clinic "will result in cancelled operations, not only in hospitals in Victoria but throughout British Columbia."

In four days of clinics last month Victoria got only 760 donors when the minimum objective was 800.

Clinics in Victoria will be held Monday and Tuesday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 1:30 to 4:30 and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

On Wednesday the clinic will move to the Student Union Building at the University of Victoria where the hours will be 9:30 to noon and 1:15 to 3:30 p.m.

with wildly-beating wings to settle on the wire. Either they couldn't navigate the entrance or their mother was keeping them out of the family home... we couldn't be sure. In any case, they had a limited choice. They could perch, or they could improve their flying.

By degrees their flights became longer and their landings less of a scramble. They are thoroughly air-worthy now, and from swoop, dive and swift pursuit, we suspect they are catching their own insects.

The same sun that greeted their venture into a green world has transformed a beach and sea that for too long were grey. I would like to believe that it also encouraged a large red rock crab into an excursion across a low-tide flat patrolled by crows and gulls.

We didn't notice this crusty

adventurer until he checked his collision course to wave a menacing pincer at us. We stood still. The crab backed into a minute pool in the lee of a rock. Its water didn't cover his shell. The first gull to come along would make a breakfast off him.

While we speculated, the crab elbowed and shuffled, deepening his retreat until his five-inch-wide carapace was barely breaking the surface. Then, steadily bubbling, he scrubbed the front rim of his shell against the sand. A pellet of sand-grains coated his tell-tale red. Finally, with first one pincer and then the other, he added shreds of seaweed to his camouflage.

Win completed the job for him by adding a spread of crinkly green sea lettuce. Then we left the beach to crab and birds, and the life-renewing sun.

Queensland Declares Emergency During Visit of Rugby Springboks

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — The Queensland state government has declared a state of emergency during the visit of the South African rugby union team.

The Springboks are due to spend 10 days in Queensland starting July 22.

Premier Johannes Bjelke-Peterson said the declaration was necessary to obtain the only venue for the matches which would provide safety for public, police and players.

Earlier, the Royal National Association which controls the proposed venue, Brisbane's exhibition sports ground, had rejected moves to stage the games there.

Bjelke-Peterson said the cabinet had decided on its extreme action because of the threat of violence and definance of law and order.

The declaration automatically suspends many civil liberties and increases police powers, among them that of search without a warrant. It also permits the state to ask the federal government for the use of the army for anti-riot control.

More than 600 anti-apartheid demonstrators have been arrested since the Springboks arrived June 24.

PINCH-HIT HOMER STARTS POWER SHOW

Getting ready to accept congratulations from club-mates as he crosses plate after smashing pinch-hit home run in third inning of baseball's annual all-star game is Oakland slugger Reggie Jackson.

Towering, two-run blast by Jackson touched off display of power by American League stars, who finished with 6-4 victory over National League Tuesday night in game at Detroit. (AP Wirephoto)

Trio of Two-Run Homers End American Frustration

DETROIT (AP) — After eight years of All-Star game frustrations, the American League finally found a winning formula.

While the fans came to see Oakland Athletics' sensational Vida Blue pitch, they all went home talking about team-mate Reggie Jackson's home run that helped the Americans stop an eight-game losing streak with a 6-4 victory over the Nationals in Tuesday night's 42nd All-Star game.

"That ball really took off and I thought it was going to knock the light tower down," said Blue, referring to the old baseball adage.

Blue came into the contest touted as baseball's best pitcher and breezed through the first three batters before dealing a gopher pitch to Bench, who smacked a two-run homer in the third inning, this time to Hank Aaron, Atlanta Braves slugger. "I threw good strikes," said Blue, "but you know they're going to hit your best stuff because they're all-stars."

Saddled with a quick three-run deficit, the partisan 33,559 fans in the Detroit Tigers' ancient park probably wondered if their American League would ever win a game and cut into the National League's 23-17 advantage.

While the American stars pounded the cover off the ball, Weaver still wasn't sure about the outcome until Oriole third baseman Brooks Robinson pocketed Bench's pop for the last out.

Weaver had hometown favorite Mickey Lolich in the bullpen to calm his nerves. The Detroit pitcher was touched for the National League's last run, a homer by Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente, before he retired the final five batters.

While the players are laboring on tactics and tactics, Dolphin officials are working on plans to make the opening season a successful one. Among the plans is formation of a "Flipper Club" for under-10 fans and distribution of season tickets.

Books of season tickets, for 11 games on the Big Four schedule, are now available at $5 for adults and $4 for old-age pensioners and students.

That one will be at Royal Athletic Park on Aug. 15, when the Dolphins get a preview of things to come in a round-robin tournament that will also involve the league's four holdover clubs from the Lower Mainland area.

Warriors Fall At Coquitlam

Ed Kowalyk, coach of the Victoria Shamrocks, plans to start rookie Dave Wirtanen in goal for tonight's interlocking lacrosse game with Brantford Warriors of the Ontario Association at Memorial Arena.

On the other hand, Brantford, which will be completing its sweep through the Western Lacrosse Association in the 8 p.m. encounter, will be without regular netminder Bob McCready.

McCreedy, whose offensive rushes down the floor have sparked many games, has had to return to Ontario ahead of his clubmates.

But his replacement, Ron Thomas, looks entirely adequate.

Perhaps feeling the strain of playing their third game in four days, Warriors bobbled a 12-4 lead in Coquitlam on Tuesday night and absorbed a 13-17 loss from Adanacs.

THREE ASSISTS
Thomas made 40 stops overall and managed to collect three assists.

Wayne Shuttleworth scored the goal which gave Coquitlam the overtime victory with one second remaining.

Adanacs advanced into a second-place tie with Vancouver Burrards, five points ahead of cellar-dwelling Shamrocks and Next game: Tonight — Brantford at Victoria, Memorial Arena, 8 p.m.

Victoria Dolphins, who expect to soon acquire some "flippers," will buckle down to serious work Thursday night under the eye of head-coach Frank Hindle and his assistants.

Preparing for their first campaign in the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League, the Dolphins will launch the final stage of their pre-season training Thursday at 6:30 on the turf at Topaz Park.

Players who survived earlier tryout sessions will be issued full strip and will soon begin battles to nail down starting positions with the Dolphins, first Vancouver Island team to crash the ranks of the Big Four grid circuit.

Hindle is expected to set a rugged training schedule for his charges, hoping to have them in impressive form for their initial test, which will come before home-town fans.

Five Home Runs Stagger Seaboard

It looked as if they were trying to get the game over in a hurry.

Bate Construction, who clinched the Victoria Major Men's Softball League title at the weekend, connected for five home runs Tuesday en route to a 13-3 triumph over Seaboard Construction.

With two out in the first inning, Harvey Stevenson and Barry Smith hit successive homers to spark a six-run outburst.

Bob Holness and pitcher Brian Pearce hit consecutive homers in the third inning to bring the margin to 9-0 and George Banks connected for another circuit blast in the fifth inning.

Singles by Brian Grexton, Bob

Low, Muzz Smith and Gary Clarke in the fourth inning were combined with two errors, to account for all of Seaboard's runs.

Nationals Down Oaks; Tackle Hampton Next

Jim Ruddy provided much of the margin for victory Tuesday as National downed Oak Bay 5-1 in the Area I Little League baseball playoff at National Park.

Young Sidelined; May Miss Opener

British Columbia Lions lost the services of flanker Jim Young and tight-end Don Alley Monday night in losing a Canadian Football League exhibition game to Ottawa Rough Riders, 41-14.

The Lions announced that Young, voted the outstanding Canadian player in the CFL last year, suffered a severed tendon in the ring finger of his left hand. He underwent surgery Tuesday and is expected to have the finger in a cast for three weeks and could miss the Lions opening league game on July 27 against Saskatchewan.

Mafia Suspects Arrested In Follow-Up to Probe

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Dozens of Mafia suspects in towns throughout Sicily and on the Italian peninsula were rounded up today in a major drive against the secret society which a parliamentary commission reported has been getting away with murder.

The arrests were made on orders sent out by Palermo Police Chief Ferdinando Li Donne and Col. Carlo Alberto Della Chiesa, commander of Sicilian carabinieri.

The suspects were being brought to Palermo for action by special anti-Mafia courts which have banished 33 other Mafia suspects to Italian islands of exile in the last two months.

The roundup was ordered immediately after publication of one of a series of reports by a parliamentary commission which has been investigating the Sicilian underworld for seven years.

The latest report described Mafia leaders as "bloody criminals, killers, dealers in drugs, persons capable of any atrocity."

The commission said the Christian Democrats, Italy's Roman Catholic party and the leader of every post-war government, is among the parties that trades political protection for the Mafia's support.

NAMES 13 MEN

The commission report Tuesday outlined the activities of 13 men it named as Mafia kingpins in post-war Italy.

Of the 13, one is in jail, Vincenzo di Carlo, a former judge serving a life term for multiple murder; four were killed in Mafia gun battles and five were confined by the government recently to islands off Sicily and Sardinia.

Another, Luciano Liggio, wanted for the killing of another Mafia chief in Sicily, disappeared in 1969 and is still a fugitive, the report said.

Another on the list, Tommaso Buscetta, was arrested last Aug. 27 in New York, charged with entering the United States on a bogus visa and is free in the United States on $75,000 bail. He was convicted in absent-tia by an Italian court in connection with the deaths of seven policemen and two bystanders in Palermo in 1963.

Buscetta and Rosario Mancino, another on the list, "are involved in drug trafficking and bear witness to the full interrelation between the Sicilian Mafia and the international underworld," the report said. Mancino is one of the 33 Mafia sent to an island last month.

The 13th on the list, Giuseppe Greco, is a free man living in Palermo.

ADMITS KILLINGS

CHESTER, England (Reuter)

A man found dead in a fume-filled car left a note confessing to the brutal murders of three French campers, police said today.

Detectives were piecing together the bizarre story of a 25-year-old Londoner whose body was discovered in a car parked about 45 miles from the murder scene in northwest England.

The discovery ended the hunt for the killer of two French sisters and their male companion found dead or dying Monday at a nearby beauty spot.

A spokesman for police headquarters said he understood the man, who has not been named, had left a message admitting the killings.

Press reports said a torn-up note had been found near the murder scene which said: "The shooter I stole from Rhyl is a good one. It shoots straight. By the time you find this I'll be in a happier place."

Less than 24 hours before the killings, a rifle was stolen from a fairground in Rhyl, north Wales.

It was apparently identical to the weapon used to murder sisters Monique and Claudine Liebert, 20 and 22, and Daniel Berland, 20.

One press report said a length of tubing ran from the exhaust pipe into the car in which the man was found.

EIGHT PERSONS SURVIVE SINKING OF FISH BOAT

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Eight persons, including a small child, were plucked from a tiny skiff in Lower Cook Inlet Tuesday about six hours after their 51-foot fishing boat sank in poor weather.

The rescue coordination centre at Elmendorf Air Force Base said a helicopter hovered more than a half hour to make the weather-hampered rescue near Kalgain Island, about 80 miles southwest of Anchorage.

A spokesman said the four adults and four children abandoned the boat Iron Mule before it sank about 4 a.m., but the rescue chopper could not reach the scene for about six hours because of rain, fog and poor visibility.

The eight persons were in good condition and apparently did not require hospitalization in Anchorage, the air force said.

They were identified as Darrell and Elaine Aiken, and their 22-month-old daughter, all of Walkerville, Mich., and Alfred and Louise Cabana, and their three children, ranging in age from 6 to 13, from Deer Island, Ore.

With the chopper hovering about 10 feet over the water, the occupants of the sinking vessel were lifted one by one to the aircraft by hoist.

RECESSION EMPTIES ROOMS

U.S. Hospitals Suffering

By VICTOR COHN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a sudden reversal of the trend of the last 25 years, hospital beds in many cities across the United States are empty — costing the government and health insurers millions of dollars.

Recession, unemployment and the lapsed health insurance policies of the jobless are mainly responsible for the development.

Hospital overbuilding in many places and drastically changed ways of medical care are also part of the picture. Federal pressure to get or keep patients out of expensive beds has been increasingly heavy. Such action is believed essential to hold down runaway Medicare and Medicaid costs and prepare for broad national health insurance.

Hospitals in Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Seattle and Denver are among those most affected.

On an average day in 1970, 186,560 U.S. hospital beds have been unoccupied, 6,784 beds more than in 1969, according to American Hospital Association figures. More than one bed in five is standing empty.

Because an unoccupied bed costs two-thirds as much to maintain as a full one (again by AHA calculation), the bill for these vacant beds is now running more than $10 million a day or $3.6 billion a year. The federal government and Blue Cross and other health plans pay the bulk of this in high rates for remaining patients.

As another result, thousands of Americans are what doctors call "walking sick," either avoiding care for lack of funds or being given care in "cheaper ways. Both factors, it is felt, could build up pressure from consumers for broader health insurance, the subject of several bills now more or less stalled in congressional committees.

Demand for nurses and other hospital workers has also dropped in affected cities. Some nurses are unemployed for the first time in years, and some new graduates are having trouble finding jobs after being exhorted to "help solve the nursing shortage."

High-Speed Supership Hailed As Forerunner of 100-Knot Navy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next in the warm currents of the month in the choppy waters of Gulf of Mexico, the United States Navy will begin testing a new ship that could cut the Atlantic crossing to one-fourth the time, or less.

Second Time Around After 25-Year Split

DETROIT (AP) — The cheeks that blushed almost 50 years ago had grown wrinkled with age. But after 25 years of divorce, Philip Raymond, 77, and Delphine Raymond, 78, were remarried.

"We're going to make it this time and are going to have another 25 years together," they vowed.

The Raymonds had been childhood sweethearts in Oakwood, N.D. For 25 years they were married, and for almost as long they were divorced.

Delphine remained single, living in Grand Forks, N.D. Philip remarried and lived in Phoenix, Ariz. His second wife died five years ago.

After spending her entire life in North Dakota, Delphine didn't return after the wedding but took a plane with Philip from Detroit to Phoenix Tuesday to begin setting up housekeeping.

"I'd been alone for so many years. I'm going to be much happier," Delphine beamed after the ceremony Monday.

Merger Talks For 2 Unions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations towards a possible merger are under way between two international unions representing 317,000 workers in the pulp and paper industry and printing pressmen.

The announcement was made here by Pat O'Neal, vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers. He said top officers of his union and the International Pressmen and Assistants' Union agreed to merger talks last week in New York.

The pulp union has about 190,000 members, with 41,000 of them in Canada, while the Printing Pressmen has about 127,000 members, about 8,000 of them in this country.

Mr. O'Neal said the two unions have much in common in that many pulp companies now are integrated with paper-consuming corporations. He said a merger would strengthen the unions on both sides of the border.

Politicians Oppose Okanagan Pulp Mills

PENTICTON (CP) — Political leaders in the Okanagan said Tuesday that establishment of such industries as pulp mills in the area would be strongly opposed unless they have better pollution control than is available at present.

A provincial government report released Monday predicts that growth in the Okanagan-Shuswap area of British Columbia in the next 30 years will include one and perhaps three pulp mills provided enough water is available and pollution is controlled.

Mayor Doug Stuart of Penticton said: "If there is any attempt to locate a pulp mill in the area before sufficient advancements are made in pollution control there will be a bitter fight."

NOT COMPATIBLE

Pulp mills, "as we know them today," said chairman P. A. Farmer of the Okanagan-Similkameen Regional District, "are not compatible with the type of industry we want in the area, firstly because of their smell and secondly because of their effluent."

Mr. Farmer said fruit growing operations, particularly apple orchards, must be put on a solid economic foundation so that the area will stop losing valuable orchard lands.

The provincial report, prepared for the federal-provincial Okanagan Basin study, predicts that employment in the agriculture industry in the Okanagan-Shuswap area will decline by the year 2020 to less than five per cent of the total labor force. It accounts for about 16 per cent today.

Mike Riley, past president of the Shuswap-Thompson River Research and Development Association, said the premise in the report that enough water be brought into the Okanagan brings up old fears that water would be diverted from the Shuswap-Thompson area.

He said the $2 million Okanagan Basin study, when complete, will only be valuable and reliable when considered against a similar study for the Shuswap-Thompson area being urged by the association.

$226,000 Bank Haul One of Biggest Ever

VEDDER CROSSING, (CP) — Two bandits in business suits, apparently aware military payday was at hand, robbed a Vedder Crossing bank of an estimated $226,000 Tuesday.

They were still at large today. The estimate was given by RCMP following one of the biggest Fraser Valley robberies since Bill Miner's train-robber gang struck at Mission Junction in 1904.

Vedder Crossing is a crossroads of 600 population, 70 miles east of Vancouver, a few miles south of Chilliwack.

The bandits accosted bank manager Cliff Hodson as he approached a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce to start work.

They escorted him inside, 45 minutes before opening time, and held him with four other employees—waiting for a time lock on the vault to trip.

Then Hodson was forced to unlock the vault.

The two gunmen then tied up the bank staff before escaping by car.

Police said they believe the bandits expected to make the big haul because CFB Chilliwack—almost across the road from the bank—has its payday today.

The stolen car was found

WELFARE RECIPIENTS DEMAND MORE MONEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Close to 100 welfare recipients demonstrated at the main office of Vancouver's social service department Tuesday, demanding immediate payment of extra money for which they claim they are eligible.

They said they wanted the payments for clothing, furniture, bedding and food.

One woman said she had three children and no sheets for their beds.

The demonstrators handed their benefit applications to the department's eligibility officer, who said they would be reviewed.

New Inquest Ordered in Crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe of the B.C. Supreme Court ordered Tuesday a new inquest under chief B.C. coroner Glen McDonald into a car accident that killed five members of the Ronald Johnson family in Haney last Boxing Day.

The judge allowed an application by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to quash the verdict of an inquest into the crash, which involved a car driven by an off-duty RCMP officer.

Munroe said he was satisfied that not all the relevant evidence had been tendered at the inquest.

"It is in the public interest that a new inquiry should be held to allay suspicions and doubt existing in the minds of a substantial number of persons," he said.

An inquest jury ruled Jan. 19 that both drivers were to blame. A speeding charge against the constable was thrown out on a technicality that the crown had not proven he had a valid B.C. driver's licence at the time of the accident.

'Participation' Key to North

VANCOUVER (CP) — Efforts to develop the Northwest Territories and the Yukon will end in bitterness and frustration unless northern Canadians are allowed to participate, Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday.

Fresh from a tour of the north, the Opposition leader said Canada cannot afford to ignore the people or material resources of the north.

The region must be developed, but if northern Canadians are not consulted "it will be a wasted effort, doomed to frustration and ending in bitterness at all levels."

Mr. Stanfield told a service club luncheon northerners are proud people who do not like policies imposed on them without consultation and their participation. "The era of paternalism is over in the north as elsewhere," he said. "The age of co-operation must begin."

Mr. Stanfield said many Canadians are discouraged from living and working in the north by a combination of tax structures which result in northern residents paying a higher percentage of their income to the government.

"That is an example of active discouragement of northern development and it is an example of the kind of thing we must change."

Life Terms For Killing Ambassador

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Two right-wing Croatian extremists were sentenced to life imprisonment today for murdering Yugoslav Ambassador Vladimir Rolovic in April.

Two other Croats each received two-year jail terms for complicity while a third accomplice was sentenced to four years.

At the week-long trial of the five, which ended July 5, Miro Baresic, 20, and Andjelko Brakovic, 22, both admitted shooting the ambassador in a guerrilla-style attack on his office April 7.

The envoy died eight days later without regaining consciousness.

The prosecutor at the trial in the Stockholm Assize Court had demanded life imprisonment for the two gunmen and "severe sentences" for the other three, who admitted helping to plan the raid.

MAN RESCUED IN THE DRINK

EDALE, England (CP) — Gordon Millar gave a drowning man the kiss of life for 30 minutes — and ended up drunk.

The man, who had drunk 14 runs before falling into a deep stream in Derbyshire's National Park, was rescued by Millar, a warden on patrol.

"I inhaled the vapor from his breath," Millar said afterwards. "It was an intoxicating incident."

NILE DELTA THREATENED

Sea gradually gnaws away at Egypt's shores, forcing authorities to send a distress call to UNESCO

U.N. officials speculate whether the Aswan High Dam may be responsible for the situation along the Delta coastline and peninsulas

Aswan Dam Blamed For Erosion of Shores

CAIRO (AP) — The Mediterranean Sea is gradually eating away at Egypt's shores and threatens to wipe part of the Nile Delta off the map.

Alarmed Egyptian authorities have sent out a distress call to the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization.

UNESCO experts, dispatched to the area, believe the Aswan High Dam might be to blame.

"The dam has stopped the flow of silt to the Delta," said Kemal Reheem, head of UNESCO's mission in Cairo. "We think that is a strong possibility causing the erosion."

Reheem said the erosion coincided "with the checking of the flow of silt in the Nile."

"That's the High Dam's doing," he added.

The silt, said Reheem, has served to reinforce the Delta coastline and peninsulas. It has also built up natural barriers fencing off damaging waves.

Trouble began a decade ago when the Aswan Dam was under construction. A breakthrough occurred at the base of the Damietta peninsula, eastern tip of the Delta. At the same time, the Rosetta branch, western counterpart of the Damietta, was flooded, and most of the houses in the area were wiped out.

The Egyptian government built steel walls that held off the sea for a while, but Reheem said things were different now.

"There is practically no silt, and the waves are absolutely free to slash at the coast."

"Of course it is not very serious yet," said Reheem, "but it is the beginning. It could be drastic, if this erosion is ignored."

Silt is a loose mud-type material with rock particles, carried by the Nile throughout the journey from its source in the heart of Africa onward to the Mediterranean.

The life-giving silt has greened the Nile Valley and reinforced the tips of the Delta peninsulas. Now the muddy waters of the Nile race into Lake Nasser behind the High Dam, and the silt sinks into the lake.

Coastal erosion is not the only trouble. The lakes of Bulo and Manzala are also in danger. Lying next to the east and west peninsulas, they are barred off from the Mediterranean by natural formations of silt barriers. Several kinds of fish breed in their fresh waters, but they are being killed off or driven away by the Mediterranean salt deposits.

As a result, Egypt's lucrative fish industry has dropped off noticeably in the past four years.

Commonwealth 'Also Considered'

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Heath restated his contention today that Canada and Australia do not want to have special links with an enlarged European Common Market.

Speaking at a Conservative conference to strengthen his demand for party support on the Market entry bid, Heath argued that Britain, in conducting its negotiations with Europe, also worked on behalf of Commonwealth interests.

"From this point of view, the result is a highly satisfactory one," he said.

"So far from cutting ourselves off from the Commonwealth, we have achieved a position in which 28 out of the 30 Commonwealth countries can have special links of their own with the enlarged community."

"The other two, Canada and Australia don't wish to have them."

This is the second time in recent days that Heath has made public statements suggesting that a special relationship with Europe was available to Canada and that Canada did not want it.

When he first made this statement in the House of Commons last week, a special relationship was available to developing countries but not to such high industrialized countries as Canada and Australia.

Kuwait Sizzling

KUWAIT (AP) — Sixty per cent of Kuwait's 750,000 people have fled the desert city-state because of daily temperatures around 115 degrees. Most of the 400,000 who left headed for the milder Mediterranean climate of Lebanon, Syria and Egypt.

A 22-year-old man who had an $8,000 break, enter and theft charge dismissed in Victoria provincial court, Tuesday took the stand and admitted the offence.

Thomas D. Cogley, 224 Yates, who now faces a charge of possession of stolen property, was called by defence counsel Harold Turnham to testify under protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

Judge William Ostler remanded the case to July 19 for judgment on whether Cogley, who admits breaking into the White House men's wear store, 852 Fort, in May and stealing the clothes, can be convicted of possession of stolen property.

Ostler took note of Turnham's argument that a thief cannot receive stolen property from himself and cannot be convicted of breaking, entering and theft as well as possession of the stolen property.

Ostler said there were many conflicting higher court decisions related to the problem.

He dismissed the breaking, entering and theft charge, ruling that the Crown failed to establish that the clothes found by police came from the White House break-in.

He said there was a small amount of clothing of small value that was from the clothing store.

Cogley told prosecutor J. W. Anderson that it was his idea to break into the store.

When cross-examined by Turnham, he said he went to the back of the store, broke a window and kicked in a partition to get into the shop.

"I then proceeded to pile clothes at the rear entrance."

He continued by saying later that he and another person moved the clothes from the rear entrance to the trunk of a car and then took them to a house.

They moved them from the house, Cogley said, to an apartment and then to a locker.

Tim DeLange, 19, of 1865 Elmhurst Place, was fined $150 when he pleaded Michael Diamond, 30, of 3514 Happy Valley, was fined $250 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Robinson also imposed a partial three-month driving ban.

Pickers Busy

VANCOUVER (CP)

Another four weeks of steady work appear to be in store for berry pickers in the Fraser Valley. The Fraser Valley Berry Growers' Association said Monday more than 7,000 pickers are working on the strawberry harvest, which will end in about 10 days, and this crew will be needed for the raspberry crop which is starting to come in.

Gordon Alexander Shafoval, 37, of 3124 Jacklin, was found guilty Tuesday by Judge William Ostler of possession of marijuana April 13.

He pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent that occurred at the same time.

Ostler fined the man $250 for the possession offence and

Peregrine Falcon Threatened by DDT In Danger of Extinction: Biologist

Peale's peregrine falcon, in danger of extinction in other parts of the world, is accumulating dangerously high levels of DDT in its coastal B.C. habitat.

Tests conducted on specimens from Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands by a provincial Fish and Wildlife Branch biologist show that some falcons have DDT levels as high as 67 parts per million.

R. P. Finegan, who conducted the tests from December of 1966 to May of last year on the falcon and some of the birds it preys on, says the statistics show the falcon to be a highly tolerant bird to survive such levels of DDT contamination.

"Such high levels put a stress on the birds which it certainly doesn't need," he said.

He pointed out that the DDT levels of the prey birds — aleut sea birds like murrelets and pigeon guillemots — do not reach nearly as high.

Finegan said tests done on pheasants show that 16 parts of DDT per million in a pheasant's brain is usually lethal. DDT levels on the falcons were taken from brain, fat, muscle and liver tissue.

The fact that the peregrine falcon's prey were found to have lower levels of DDT in their systems could indicate they were able to withstand no more of the contaminant before succumbing.

He said a British researcher's findings with finches indicate that a diet of two parts of DDT per million over a period of time produced thyroid abnormalities. Body temperatures rose, egg sizes increased, indicating a general hyper-thyroid condition.

The significance of this evidence is that the birds falcons prey on reach DDT levels higher than two parts per million. Of those birds examined by Finegan, one had a level of 6.8 parts per million and another 3.7.

And, although the falcons may not die from DDT poisoning immediately, the effects on the species are more far reaching, he said.

Peregrine falcons are a protected species in British Columbia, and the only ones allowed to be taken come from their most common B.C. habitat, the Queen Charlottes. These number only a very few.

Finegan says the DDT the falcons accumulate comes not only from B.C. but also from neighboring areas. Since the birds feed partially on fish and shrimp, which migrate from southern waters, often the DDT level is beyond the control of B.C. authorities.

He says he is satisfied with the measures taken by B.C. agencies in controlling DDT and its use. The department of agriculture maintains a close watch on the substance, and allows its use only by prescription.

As Finegan says in his study, "there is cause for concern" over the presence in the tissues of substances which are recognized as possessing poisons which attack brain cells and endocrine glands.

"The peregrine falcon... must be regarded as a sensitive biological indicator of environmental contamination with residual pesticides," the report says.

Finegan goes on to say the presence of persistent pesticide residues in these species is viewed as a "manifestation of industrialization, not only of manufacture but also of agriculture and silviculture."

Finegan says the more serious threat which emerges from the accumulation of residues concerns the productivity of the population, rather than the health of the individual bird.

His study produces evidence of "widespread contamination of British Columbia's coastal waters with a variety of chlorinated hydrocarbon pesticides."

Finegan says the use of DDT is much more responsible now than it has been, with users now requiring a prescription. Lesser amounts are being used for specific jobs than used to be the case, he said.

Public concern is largely responsible for this increase in control of DDT, as people do not like to see mass fish kills, or greenery destroyed by pesticides, nor do they like to breathe it into their own lungs, he said.

He ended his remarks with a question which more people are asking themselves, as more evidence of man's tampering with his environment comes to light:

"If the world is not fit for animals, it's certainly not fit for humans, is it?" Finegan said.

$89,000 PROJECT STARTS

LADYSMITH — Construction begins this week on an $89,000 downtown renewal project here despite protests registered by two business interests at town council Monday.

Mayor Kay Grouhel was sympathetic with laundromat operator Mrs. Fern Wrean and Royal Bank manager Art Heaven, who complained the project would result in the loss of 12 parking spaces in front of their 1st Street building.

But she criticized downtown merchants for failing to meet council halfway on renewal plans.

Heaven protested businessmen had not been contacted and told of the proposed changes but Ald. Pat O'Brien said they had been given every opportunity to protest since council first proposed the project four years ago.

Both business people expressed concern that such changes might drive customers and businesses out of the downtown area. In their case, they referred to plans for a right turn lane on 1st and High streets which would result in inadequate parking space.

Mayor Grouhel said Tuesday the parking situation could be eased without altering the plan.

Improvements will include road and sidewalk levelling, ornamental benches, planters and garbage containers in a four block area. Opposition by the Ladysmith Ratepayers' Association and other citizens have plagued plan confirmations twice in the past four years.

Teachers' Head Lauds Land Preserve Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government's plan to preserve parcels of British Columbia land in a natural state will mean a major boost for environmental education programs, the past president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation Tuesday.

Jim Killen said the federation if offering a short course this summer in environmental education, and a task force of elementary science teachers has been set up to develop outdoor education programs.

"Preserving some areas in a natural state for use by school children will help this new outdoor education program to develop."

Environment Minister Jack Davis announced earlier this month that a $4.5 million fund — part of Ottawa's centennial gift to B.C. — will be used to buy up parcels of land and preserve them from development.

Gravel Pit Issue Static

The Cordova Bay gravel pit controversy appears to be back where it started, with no solution in sight.

Efforts to find an alternative to a provincial highways department gravel stockpiling operation in the Cordova Bay-Santa Clara Road area have so far failed.

A highways department spokesman said a Saanich suggestion to use a municipal gravel pit proved unworkable. There wasn't enough space there.

Work is going ahead at the initial stockpiling site which drew complaints from area residents. The highways department has undertaken to keep the operation as neat as possible, the spokesman said.

The stockpiling is being carried out for the nearby Pat Bay Highway construction project.

Hit, Run Motorist Cowardly, Judge Says

COURTENAY — John Grealis, 40, was sentenced to six months in jail here Tuesday after a hit-and-run accident Mar. 26 in the Little River area.

Judge Harry McKay said in county court Grealis was "callous and cowardly" in failing to stop after seriously injuring a man and wife as they walked along a road. Grealis pleaded guilty.

James Madden and his wife Susan had been in hospital for some time, prosecutor T. G. Ryan said. Madden had a broken leg and his wife a broken pelvis.

Ryan said there were no houses in the immediate area of the accident and the Maddens were spotted in a ditch by a passing motorist.

Grealis said he thought he had hit a deer.

The judge said it was not a case of a man panicking and then coming to his senses, but the case of a mature man hitting two people, leaving them, hearing nothing on the radio, and doing nothing.

Crown evidence indicated the man had consumed "two drinks of rum" just before the accident.

GRAND JURY PROBES PRESS ON WAR PAPERS

By KEN W. CLAWSON
WASHINGTON (WP) — A federal grand jury in Boston is investigating possible criminal charges against The New York Times, The Washington Post and The Boston Globe in connection with the publication of secret Pentagon documents on the Vietnam war.

Neil Sheehan, a New York Times reporter credited with breaking the story about the U.S. decision-making process on Vietnam, and his wife, Susan, a magazine writer and author, were also named in the government's case before the grand jury last week in Boston. The Post has learned.

Government officials have hinted at the possibility of empaneling an east coast grand jury to seek criminal charges against those who conveyed and accepted the top secret Pentagon papers along with Dr. Daniel Ellsberg, who has admitted leaking the papers to the press. He has been charged with unauthorized possession of classified documents.

Sources said Monday night the government in utmost secrecy started its criminal investigation by presenting evidence before a federal grand jury that has been sitting in Boston on other matters since early April. Two persons employed by different printing firms in the greater Boston area testified before the grand jury last week. Sources said the printers apparently were involved in copying parts of the 47-volume Pentagon study that ultimately ended up in the possession of the New York Times. The same sources said that Ellsberg was not involved in early testimony and that the government seemed to be concentrating initially on how the documents were duplicated and how they came into possession of the New York Times. Two unidentified lawyers from the Justice Department's internal security division and Richard E. Bachman, 36, an Assistant U.S. Attorney in Boston, reportedly stressed to the grand jury that the criminal proceedings were separate in themselves and do not conflict with the Supreme Court decision permitting the newspapers to publish the contents of the documents. Secrecy of the proceedings was stringent, with U.S. Attorney Herbert F. Travers Jr. discarding usual policy of making public witness lists and the subject of a grand jury probe. The mention of Susan Sheehan in the case gave rise to speculation that the government believes she may have been a conduit through which the documents passed to the New York Times. She has not been mentioned in any Times' account of the incident nor is she identified in the new Bantam Book, "The Pentagon Papers, based on investigative reporting by Neil Sheehan."

Contempt Action Against CBS Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States House of Representatives has indirectly killed an attempt to cite CBS for contempt of Congress without cutting to the constitutional heart of the dispute.

"The First Amendment towers over this proceeding like a colossus, and no esprit de corps, no tenderness of one member for another should cause us to topple this monument to our liberties," said Emanuel Celler, senior New York Democrat and chairman of the House judiciary committee, during debate Tuesday.

The First Amendment of the U.S. constitution guarantees free speech and a free press.

But instead of going to a direct floor vote that could have forced a court fight between broadcast journalists and legislators, the House laid the case to rest with a parliamentary manoeuvre that avoided outright rejection of a commerce committee recommendation that CBS be cited for contempt in a dispute over its controversial documentary, The Selling of the Pentagon.

"I feel that this is a sad day for the American people," commerce committee chairman Harley Staggers (Dem. W.Va.) said after the House, by a vote of 226 to 181, returned the citation to the committee.

The committee had urged contempt action against the Columbia Broadcasting System for refusing to supply untelevised material from the news documentary.

Staggers pronounced the citation dead. "We could do a lot of things, but I don't see any sense in it. It would just be a futile effort."

"The vote today showed the awesome power of the television networks and the news media brought to bear on the House," he said. He insisted again he was not attacking the First Amendment press freedom in his bid to obtain film leftovers from the documentary that criticized Pentagon public-relations spending.

Staggers had sought the citation against CBS and network president Frank Stanton in an effort to obtain the outtakes to check our charges that questions and answers were manipulated through electronic manipulation unnoticed by the viewer.

In a statement, Stanton said: "We are very pleased by the House vote to recommit the proposed contempt citation to the commerce committee. As responsible journalists, we shall continue to do our best to report on public events in a fair and objective manner."

Representative Ogden Reid (Rep., N.Y.), former editor and publisher of the old New York Herald Tribune and a leader in the attempt to wreck the contempt citation, said it was "an empty citation, said it was 'an historic victory for the free press.'"

Reid added: "The vote clearly shows that Congress recognizes the First Amendment rights of the broadcast media to edit as they please, just as the print media have done throughout our history."

$2,585 Per Enlistment Is Just Too Much ... Even for Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's top manpower official is reported to have put at least a temporary halt to the army's high-priced television recruiting campaign, despite arguments by army officials that the advertising was a success.

The army spent $10.6 million this spring on radio and television ads featuring changes in the army that have made military life easier and emphasizing enlistment in the combat skills would guarantee a 16-month tour in Europe.

The army said 4,100 recruits signed up as a direct result of the advertising campaign, an average cost of $2,585 a man.

"Over-all the results are very encouraging," said John G. Kester, deputy secretary of the army, who is in charge of the advertising program.

But Pentagon sources said Roger T. Kelley, assistant secretary of defence for manpower and reserve affairs, feels preliminary results of the 13-week campaign that began March 1 don't justify spending more money without further evaluation.

Found Dead in Car

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Former torch singer Libby Holman Schanker died as a result of suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning, Connecticut's chief medical examiner has ruled.

Miss Holman, who received prominence in the 1920s for her throaty renditions of such favorites as Body and Soul, was found dead June 18 in the front seat of her Rolls-Royce in the her husband maintained in garage of the home that she and Stamford.

Dr. Elliot Gross, the medical examiner, said Tuesday the cause of Miss Holman's death was not known earlier because he did not complete chemical tests until Monday.

In addition to her singing, she was known for her involvement in two major court cases.

In the first, she was charged with murder in the shooting death of her first husband, Zachary Smith Reynolds, a member of the Reynolds tobacco family in North Carolina. Charges against her and one of Reynolds' best friends later were dropped for lack of evidence.

The second case won her $6 million of the Reynolds fortune when their son, Christopher, died in a mountain climbing expedition in 1950.

Miss Holman married actor Ralph Holmes, but that marriage ended in separation after six years. Artist Louis Schanker was her third husband.

She left some $2.35 million to her family and friends. She also left her farmhouse and 25.6 acres of land in Stamford to Boston University.

Business Piles Up for These Students

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Geraldine Peet Sweeps Up

For the first time in the 30-year history of the Tally-Ho touring wagons, girls are in charge of "equestrian sanitation."

The girls — both first year University of Victoria students — came up with the job description when they had to fill out the 1971 census forms.

Their job entails following the horse-drawn wagons around the city streets, making sure the horses won't be labelled "polluters" by onlookers.

Anne MacMillan, 20, and Geraldine Peet, 19, had a difficult time convincing friends and relatives that they were going to take the job.

"I guess they thought we wouldn't stoop so low to earn an honest living," Miss Peet said.

Meet People

Both girls say they like working outside and enjoy meeting a variety of people on their rounds.

"You get to know all the men working on the roads and sewers," Miss MacMillan said. "They all wave to us as we go by."

Miss MacMillan described her job as "not super strenuous, but tiring." The girls work seven days a week, alternating the 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 12 noon to 9 p.m. shifts.

The girls reported that they had developed a fine eye for "brown spots on the road."

"Even when I'm out on a date I can't help watching the road," Miss MacMillan said.

The girls enjoy the reactions of tourists to their occupation.

"Some just stand and stare as if they couldn't believe it, while others nearly die laughing," Miss MacMillan said.

Art Knapp, who manages the Tally-Ho tours for visitors, describes the girls as "the best clean-up crew I've ever had."

"When we had boys doing the job, I used to have to send them back over the route, but the girls do a perfect job the first time," he said.

"The company hasn't had a single complaint from the public this year," Knapp added.

Patrol Route

The girls patrol the route in Volkswagens with large wooden containers mounted on the back bumper. When they find horse droppings, they park, if possible, but if no space is available they halt traffic for "a second" to sweep up.

"We used to circle the block if we couldn't park," Miss MacMillan said. "But sometimes it would take half an hour before we could clean up one spot, and, in the meantime, business was piling up elsewhere."

Gardeners along the tour routes, who used to nip out with broom and dustpan themselves to sweep up fertilizers for roses, are not being deprived.

The girls will deliver manure to anyone in the area on request.

Miss Peet and Miss MacMillan have been assured jobs next year if they want them. Miss Peet will probably be back, but Miss MacMillan is planning a switch from shovel to bedpan. She hopes to enter nurses' training in January.

Sometimes a Shovel Is Needed

Separate Patients To Reduce Stress

TORONTO (CP) — Two Vancouver doctors say abortions and sterilization should be carried out in a separate hospital unit to reduce the risk of emotional distress among patients.

The suggestion was made by Dr. David Claman and Dr. John Wakeford in an article in the current edition of the Canadian Medical Association Journal published Tuesday.

The doctors, both on the staff of Vancouver General Hospital, say the special unit is needed because putting women having abortions in beds next to women having babies generates emotional distress for both.

The doctors said that one of every three procedures now being performed in the obstetrical and gynecology department of the Vancouver hospital was either an abortion or sterilization. One abortion was performed for every 2.35 live births.

They said the hospital found it could handle a maximum of 40 abortions a week.

The two said that in 1969, the hospital performed only 79 abortions and until 1968 had performed only an average of 38 a year. They said the increased number of abortions had led to a drop in the number of children up for adoption and had half emptied a home for unwed mothers.

Consumers' Complaints on the Increase

By IAN HAMILTON

When it comes to money, the buck stops at Michael Hanson.

Appointed B.C.'s first consumer affairs officer in December of 1969, he's the fella you take your gripes to when you feel you haven't had full value for your dollar and can't get satisfaction yourself.

Guest speaker Tuesday at a weekly Kiwanis Club luncheon at The Empress, he said more complaints than ever are flooding into his office, which consists of him and his secretary.

For a man who spends his life listening to complaints, he wasn't complaining. But he did admit it was a hard job for any one man to do.

FAMILY SECTION

"People often refer to me as being head of a department," he said. "There isn't a department ... there's just me."

Last year he handled over 700 complaints and obtained cash refunds and account reductions for cheated consumers totalling $27,000.

"I'd like to do a great deal more in the way of spreading information to the public about their rights under the Consumer Protection Act, but I just don't have the time," said Hanson, pointing out that most of his day is taken up chasing down cases.

Hanson is a veteran of the criminal investigations branch of the London (England) Metropolitan Police Force the famed Scotland Yard.

Hanson told club members he can often tell from the tone and content of letters whether or not the writer is telling the truth. Since he insists on all complaints in writing, that sixth police sense can sometimes be of more than minor importance.

With 50 per cent of complaints concerning either motor vehicles or credit, he did agree consumers can sometimes be as sneaky and crooked as the small percentage of "bad" businessmen.

But thus far, most of the villains are the sellers rather than the buyers.

Rather than lecture, Hanson preferred to field questions and give samples of the kinds of cases that greet him when he opens his mail every morning.

An auto dealer, for example, sold a woman a "brand new" car which she drove in complete faith until a rear end collision peeled back the vehicle's insides and revealed the remains of a sinister fibreglass filling. The brand new car had been in an accident before.

In a similar case, another woman was sold a "new" demonstrator model she later found out had been a total writeoff three months before.

"I don't have any aces up my sleeve," said Hanson referring to all such cases.

"When you start something new like this, you make your guidelines as you go along."

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In your column I saw the question of whether or not one who has earned a PhD degree should be addressed as Doctor. Why not?

It irks me no end that in the United States only medical doctors are addressed as Doctor. On the other hand, in Germany, any uneducated goose who happens to be married to a doctor calls herself "Frau Doktor."

DEAR IRKED: Save your ink. Any dummkopf can tell in two minutes whether the frau married the title or earned it.

DEAR ABBY: Carol and I have been married for 12 years and we get along better than most married couples I've known. I work for an international company, and I've had four promotions since our marriage. Each promotion has meant moving to another state.

The first time we moved I noticed my wife had this old trunk filled with love letters, pictures, souvenirs and junk from previous boy friends. She collected ashtrays from restaurants everytime she had a date. They are all labelled. This trunk has got to weigh 200 pounds.

I was annoyed to think she'd hang on to all that junk, but I didn't say anything.

DEAR ABBY: I am 60 and the lady I am dating is 55. I take her out to dinner twice a week, and we always go to the finest places.

I am in business for myself and I carry my business cards with me at all times. When I give waiters and waitresses a tip, which is always 20 per cent of the bill, I give them one of my business cards, too. I figure as long as I'm helping them make a living, they can also give me a break if they need anything in my line.

My lady friend says that this is not done in the best of society, and it's embarrassing for me. Who is right? It Pays to Advertise.

DEAR "IT": The lady is right. I agree, it does pay to advertise, but there are subtler ways of doing it.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Now I am really burned! After 12 years, she is still hauling this stuff around the country. I think it's time she got rid of it, but I don't want to play the role of the jealous husband. What is your opinion, and what should I do?—Carol's Quiet Man

DEAR MAN: The junk belongs to your wife, and if she wants to haul it all over the world for the next 50 years, it's her privilege. You've been smart to be quiet about it. Don't spoil it now. When Carol decides she doesn't need those souvenirs anymore, she'll throw them out of her own accord. Apparently, she still needs a little support for her sagging ego. Or she could just be sentimental.

TODDLERS TO BE LIBERATED

Feminists Go Into Nursery

By NADINE BROZAN

NEW YORK (NYT) — Women's liberation in the nursery? No more pink for girls and blue for boys, dolls for girls and trucks for boys, sewing kits for girls and football helmets for boys?

That's how it could be if some believers in the women's liberation credo have their way. Having already crusaded for equal treatment of the sexes in the professions, schools and the home, they're now turning their attention to the playpen.

Liberated mothers, it seems, want their daughters and sons — to be liberated even before they learn to read, so now they're planning groups as well as individual action.

The New York chapter of the National Organization for Women is turning its attention to discrimination in the toddler set.

Its education committee, along with that of NOW's new Brooklyn chapter and an organization called Parents for Responsibility in the Toy Industry, has just planned a research and action project that will focus on manufacturers, stores and consumers.

The women will monitor television commercials to see if toys are being touted as appropriate for one sex or the other.

They also hope to meet with manufacturers to urge that war toys and violent toys, such as monsters depicted as attacking women, as well as fashion and homemaker toys, be altered or taken off the market.

They will encourage the production of more neutral or "basic" toys such as building kits and will voice their objections to packaging that specifies that toys are for girls or for boys. They may also conduct boycotts.

DOLLS FOR BOYS

"We are going to ask the manufacturers to make more space, science and adventure toys for girls and more dolls for boys," explained Lili Port, a freelance toy designer who is co-ordinating the program.

According to Anne Grant West, who was in charge of NOW's school report and is a co-ordinator of the New York City chapter's education committee, the group hopes to issue a pamphlet containing its findings and recommendations for parents by the end of the summer and "to have the Federal Communications Commission set up nonsexist guidelines for television" (that would include advertisements for children's toys).

Mrs. West has already desexualized toys in her own home. The mother of two boys, aged 2 and 1, recalled recently that "when the grandparents asked what the children needed, I said that the only thing they didn't have was dolls. They said, 'don't you think dolls will make them sissies?'"

"I had to end up buying the dolls myself. My older son calls them his darlings," she said, adding quickly that he is equally partial to trucks.

According to the women interviewed, it's not the dolls (for boys) or trucks (for girls) per se that is important; it's the fact that so many toys symbolize one sex or the other.

By confining boys to mechanical or gymnastic products and girls to dolls and home-making equipment, society, the women say, is already imposing upon children predetermined roles and stunting their intellectual and emotional development.

Another common complaint voiced was the lack of intellectually stimulating toys for girls.

MORE OPPORTUNITY

"Boys are given so much more opportunity in toys," said Mrs. Judith Sanders of Brooklyn, the wife of David Sanders, an assistant professor of mathematics at Brooklyn College and mother of two boys, aged 2 years and 8 months. "I went to a department store recently to buy a gift for a friend's daughter, and all I saw were blenders, mixers, tea sets and vacuum cleaners."

"They prepare girls for homemaking and nothing else. I ended up getting a book."

(New York Times News Service)

The 1971 census (except for computerized results) is now a thing of Forms, long or short, were all signed, sealed and delivered by the end of June. Yet, we still hear mutterings and rumblings about the questionnaires.

"Rubbish" is the word most frequently used. "Invasion of privacy" is a familiar response. "Too many questions" is yet another gripe.

Yet, according to a newsletter entitled Census, from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the 40 questions in the long census form this year had nothing on the number of questions asked in a Canadian census one hundred years ago.

Back in 1871, census-takers had to complete no less than nine different forms during their enumeration.

The first, entitled "return of the living," contained 23 columns. In the appropriate places, the census-taker had to write each person's answer to questions on home, name, sex, date of birth, religion, nationality, place of birth, professions, marital status, education and disabilities.

The second form asked for the name, sex, date of birth, religion, place of birth, profession and marital status of any person who had died within the last 12 months, as well as the month and cause of death. The third form, containing 19 columns, asked about public establishments, real estate and moveable property. It also featured questions on the personnel of institutions, on vehicles and agricultural implements.

The fourth form, entitled "cultivated land and its products," had 36 columns for recording information on crops.

Cattle and animal products, including fur pelts, were to be recorded on Form Number 5. Forest products were enumerated separately, on a seventh form.

There were 18 columns in the sixth form, "industrial establishments." These asked about the amount of capital invested, the hours of work, the number of employees, the amount of wages, the source of power and the raw materials used, as well as the types of articles manufactured and their value.

Thirty-three columns applying to navigation and fisheries in form 8 kept the census-takers busy asking questions, including the type of each boat in port on a certain date, its tonnage, and the quantities of different fish caught.

Mineral products (form number 9) was relatively simple. It had only 21 columns.

And all this, mind you, in days long before automobiles, those forms were carried about the countryside on horseback.

Meatcutters in Victoria and Vancouver have won substantial increases in their weekly wages, along with upped rates for meat and delicatessen clerks and part-time employees.

The increases may be well deserved. Certainly those in this type of work would say so anyway. Certainly the great number of gainfully employed in the province will look at the increases, shrug their shoulders, re-adjust their budgets, and turn their eyes ahead to increases in their own wages or salaries to offset added demands of this kind.

Just as certainly, those on fixed incomes (retired people and families on low incomes) will envision a day, not too far from now when meat prices are upped to cover the new wage scales. When that happens (and I'm certain that no one who reads this column is naive enough to believe it won't) they will need to take another notch in their belts and, in many instances, scratch meat almost entirely from their food menus.

***

Talk about coincidence... here's one for the book! A short time ago I wrote of two friends — Kay and Marion — and an overseas adventure in which they were locked out of a Southampton guest house when they returned at one in the morning, after visiting friends. At their request, I didn't use their last names.

Soon after the column appeared, my telephone rang and an amused voice wanted to know those last names.

To my astonishment, the amused voice turned out to be another Kay (Shepherd). She had a friend named Marion (Chubb). They had just returned from overseas and I gathered that somewhere en route had had much the same experience as the Kay (Paulin) and Marion (Steven-son) I had written about.

Young Drug Users Need Cool Parents

By LOUIS CASSELS
What should a parent do if he discovers that a son or daughter is using illegal drugs?
Dr. Henlee H. Barnette, professor of Christian Ethics at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., has some down-to-earth advice for parents who find themselves in that agonizing quandary.
The first rule, he says, is "don't turn a youngster on drugs over to the police."

MOST DAMAGING

This is "the most damaging thing a parent can do" because it may permanently alienate the youth from his family. And it may also land him in prison "where he'll get a postgraduate course in real criminal activity."

Others parental reactions likely to do more harm than good, the Baptist teacher says, are corporal punishment and dire warnings.

"Remember that one of the reasons the youth is on drugs may be to get his parents' attention. Don't fly into a blind rage and beat your child."

Beating drives a youngster into total rebellion and destroys any hope of reaching a rapport which would enable the parent to be helpful to him or influence him.

Trying to frighten young people into giving up drugs by telling them horror stories about the results is a useless tactic "because those on drugs usually know more about their nature and effects than parents do."

KEEP COOL

So much for the don'ts. What do you do?

"Keep your cool and don't panic," Barnette counsels. Try to get your son or daughter to talk with you about drugs. And it must be a real dialogue, not a thinly disguised parental lecture.

"Communication is essential in coping with the young drug abuser. During this talk, parents must demonstrate the fine art of listening as well as giving advice. The victim of drugs needs to be heard, rather than harangued and harassed."

Next, "call a physician and seek his advice and help." A doctor usually will be sympathetic and will know what further steps to take to get the youngster under medical and/or psychiatric treatment.

If a youth won't see a doctor, the parent can try to arrange for some other source of outside-the-family counseling, perhaps by a minister, a psychologist, a favorite teacher or an adult friend.

Women Put Speakers On the Firing Line

WASHINGTON (WP) — In an atmosphere of raucous dissent, members of a newly formed coalition of women activists recently greeted McCarthy and pediatrician-peace advocate Benjamin Spock with shouts, angry questions and accusations of being "sexists."

Before McCarthy could utter more than a word, delegates to the national women's political caucus were on their feet firing questions.

He was asked whether he had any females on his own staff and, if so, how many. McCarthy replied that 75 per cent of his staff is made up of women.

Pressed further, McCarthy said that three out of four of the top positions on his personal staff were "manned" by women. The women staffers, he said, all received larger salaries than the male. Spock also met intense questioning from the floor. He admitted that in his book, "Decent and Indecent," he had written some "foolish and unwise things" about the role of women in American life. "The book was written four years ago," he said, "and I have revised my views considerably."

"I admit that I was a sexist," Spock added. "I was an unconscious sexist, but that's no excuse. Most sexists are not conscious of it."

Spock would not comment when asked specifically which views he had revised.

He urged the women to consider giving their support to the new party, a political organization which is developing plans to run a presidential and vice-presidential candidate in 1972. The Republicans and Democrats, he said, "have failed miserably" in trying to solve the nation's problems.

Victoria's Population Will Double by 2001

By the year 2001, the population of the Greater Victoria area will have doubled, according to population projection figures from the Capital Regional district.

And those figures are considered conservative, a spokesman said Tuesday.

This comparison is based on the most recent census, 1966, when 157,008 people lived in the area composed of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney.

DOESN'T INCLUDE

And that doesn't even include the people who live in the unorganized areas of Colwood, Langford, View Royal and Metcalfe.

The regional board projection sees 314,100 people living in the Greater Victoria area in 2001, almost exactly a 100 per cent increase on the 1966 figures.

Perhaps the most surprising feature of this projection is that the 2001 population of Saanich will comprise almost half the population of the entire area. Saanich is seen to have a 150,000 population by that time, an increase of 155 per cent over the 1966 figure of 58,845.

The peninsula municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney won't exactly be static either. Their combined populations for 2001 are projected as 34,000, or about 11 per cent of the total area figure.

And Central Saanich appears to have the most spectacular growth pattern as well. Their 1966 figure of 3,640 is projected to balloon to 14,000, a whopping increase of 284 per cent.

Exhibiting the slowest growth pattern according to the figures will be Oak Bay, which is seen to increase its population 49 per cent over the 35 years to 27,000.

To compare with the projected doubling of the metropolitan area of Victoria, a provincial government report forecasts a growth of 250 per cent in the Okanagan-Shuswap area.

From a 1970 figure of 132,000, the population is predicted as 444,000 by the year 2020, a growth period of 49 years.

This projection was made on the premise that there will be enough water brought into the semi-arid 11,000 square-mile Okanagan-Shuswap area, and that technology will overcome pollution problems, paving the way for more industry in the area.

The report was prepared for the $2 million study being made of the Okanagan Basin by the governments of Canada and B.C.

MAJOR EXPANSION

Major expansion is predicted in mining, forestry, tourism service industries and manufacturing. At least one and perhaps as many as three pulp mills are forecast for the area.

Service industries are predicted to account for the vast majority of jobs in the area — 72 per cent — while agriculture will be the big loser of jobs, falling from today's level of 16 per cent to less than five per cent.

The total labor force, is estimated at 155,000, with personal income reaching $3.5 billion in terms of 1970 dollars. The entire population of B.C. made about $7 billion last year.

Honest Saigon Election Sought by Big Minh

By PETER A. JAY

SAIGON (WP)—It is one of the few quiet places that remain in Saigon.

From the terrace of his villa, Gen. Duong

Van (Big) Minh looks out at a garden filled with the orchids which are his hobby and his pride. Domestic quail, raised for their tiny eggs, chirp in a cage.

... blocked by Thieu

The general, always popular in Saigon but almost a recluse since his return from exile in Bangkok three years ago, is a presidential candidate now. And as he gradually becomes once again a public man, the tranquility of his guarded private life is more frequently disturbed.

Foreign journalist, Saigon politicians and old army friends beat a path to his door—and those who found the general inaccessible a few months ago are now being granted appointments.

Students, unhappy with the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu, visit him too; it is highly likely, after all, that the general will turn out to be the only opponent permitted by law to run against the president.

The general is doing what he can, however, to help Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky qualify as a candidate in the race.

"I don't support Ky personally," he said. "But I would like to see a fair election. Let's see if we are a democracy or not," he shrugged. "If the vice-president of the country is not allowed to run...

South Vietnam's new election law requires all presidential candidates, in order to qualify, to secure the support of 100 provincial councilmen or 40 national assemblymen. This Minh expects to be able to do—although he said Thieu is making it difficult for him.

But Ky, who in a three-way election could be expected to draw votes from Thieu and increase Minh's chances, will require the endorsement of councilmen favorable to Minh if he is to get on the ballot—and even with Minh's help he may not qualify.

Potential Candidate Supports Ky's Bid To Enter Election

Thieu, Minh said, this week has used all the machinery of government at his disposal to secure pledges of support from about 400 of the 550 councilmen and from about 100 of the 195 assemblymen and senators.

The general said, as he has often of late, that he has grave doubts that the Oct. 3 presidential election will be fair. If it is, he said, he will gladly support Thieu or anyone else who wins. He did not say what he would do if the election appeared patently dishonest, but remarked that such a development could only be "very helpful for the communists."

At 55, Minh has changed little from the day nearly eight years ago when, as president Ngo Dinh Diem's military adviser, he led the coup that deposed Diem and was immediately followed by the president's assassination.

He stands nearly six feet—hence his nickname—and regularly plays tennis at Saigon's "cercle sportif."

He is running as a peace candidate, and if extensive interviewing is any guide, that is the way most Vietnamese see him. But his plans for peace have been cloaked in the vaguest of generalities, and he made them no clearer in the interview.

"It's very simple—if you have a government supported by the people, you are in a stronger position to negotiate," he said, speaking in slow and careful English but switching, for difficult points, to an interpreter. He has said firmly that he opposes any coalition with the communists and supports a strong South Vietnamese army.

If elected, he said, "The first order of business would be to prove to the people that there is justice, to make them feel that government officials are not the agents of oppression or the embodiment of corruption."

Asked to comment on the seven-point proposal advanced ten days ago by the Viet Cong at the Paris negotiations, Minh chuckled.

"Madame Binh (Nguyen Thi Binh, the chief Viet Cong negotiator) is very clever," he said. "She knows the U.S."

worries very much about the prisoners of war, and she is using that."

'CENSORSHIP' FAVORED, SAYS DAVEY

BOSTON (UPI)—Most Canadians would favor "some sort of censorship" and establishment of press councils to handle media complaints from the public.

Keith Davey, chairman of the Senate special committee on mass media, told the American Newspaper Guild's 38th annual convention the world press is suffering from a "credibility gap."

"If the media turns people off, it is because society at large turns them off," he said.

Summarizing the findings of a three-volume study by his committee, Davey said recent criticism of the media arises from "an alarmed and frightened populace suddenly aware of a challenge to their value system; a people unable to distinguish between the phenomena and those who report it."

He said the survey revealed Canadians "mostly use television as their primary news source, and most would favor some sort of censorship of the media." In a Gallup Poll, he said, 67 per cent think a press council would be a good idea.

Davey was featured speaker at the evening banquet of the guild, which represents 33,000 newspaper personnel in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico. The five-day convention continues today with closed committee sessions and panel reports, with resolutions to be voted upon Thursday.

East Pakistanis in Waiting Game

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

RAJNARYANPUR (AP) — Baobabs and mango trees line the creek off the 10-foot asphalt ribbon which passes for the main road in North Bengal, in East Pakistan. They frame a tranquil, pastoral scene—until one notices a settlement of 14 structures has been wiped out.

"The army," nearby Bengalis explain.

Rajnaryanpur was at the first bridge the army crossed last April when its reinforcements rolled into North Bengal to sweep Awami League secessionists from what for almost two weeks had been an independent Bangla Desh, or Bengali land.

The shattered village was an early stop on a trail of terror and violence gouged across East Pakistan.

In Rajshahi, on the northern bank of the Ganges where it forms the border with India, a solemn secretary of an army-selected peace committee says: "We are arming ourselves."

BLEW UP BRIDGE

The local chief administrative officer Rashidul Hassan, a Bengali, says five peace committee members in two weeks were murdered. Their killers were presumed to be members of the Mukhti Fauj, the Awami League's militants.

Last month Pakistan's military president, Gen. Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan, set a four-month timetable for the start of the transfer of power from the army to civilians. That day sappers blew up a main bridge leading into Rajshahi, headquarters for a district of more than three million people. They were believed to be rebels.

Elsewhere, a Bengali police officer in Rangpur, where the Pakistan army maintains a large cantonment, loudly and defiantly told a foreign acquaintance:

"We will wait. The time will come when we will kill these people."

The trail of destruction, after more than two months, is there for anyone to see. In a mile one can count from the road a dozen settlements wiped out. In five miles, the count rises to 41. They represent homes of at least 1,000 now gone.

To the north and west of Saidpur, 150 miles north of here, one can make a similar count—21 settlements in three miles.

NOBODY FOR MILES

Closer to the border town of Dinajpur, once one of the most prosperous areas in the rice-growing province of more than 70 million people, you drive two miles without coming across a human being. It is an astonishing experience in an area where people once lived packed 700 to the square mile.

The few who remain believe at least 90 per cent of the population has fled into India, less than 10 miles away.

Bengalis tell of killings during "army operations." Almost all tell of farmers, bullock-cart drivers and rickshaw pullers being shot by soldiers when found on the roadside. They say many villages near roads and bridges were cleared because the army wanted to eliminate possible hiding places.

Some actions were retaliatory.

An army contingent was sent to a Hindu village near Bogra. Several men were shot, the population of several hundred dispersed and the buildings burned in what was described as a warning to members of the Mukhti Fauj.

A tour of North Bengal turns up many such stories. The north is a distinct area of more than 15 million people in 13,347 square miles between the Ganges to the West and the Jumna River which divides North Bengal from Mymensingh district.

Bangla Desh independence forces controlled much of it until the army started its drive in April.

200,000 DIED

Western diplomats, basing estimates on their own observations and the experience of aid technicians, missionaries, foreign businessmen and tea planters, reckon at least 200,000 persons have died throughout East Pakistan since March 25.

That was when black-beret commandos swarmed into Dacca to arrest party leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and smash the Awami League, the majority party in the National Assembly elected in December. The army said it acted to prevent him from splitting East from West Pakistan.

Maj. Gen. Rao Farman Ali Khan, head of civil affairs for the martial law regime in the East, says casualties were between 5,000 and 10,000, figures contradicted as being too low by almost every subordinate army officer one meets.

The army was the most efficient but not the only party to the slaughter. Its targets were Bengalis believed backing the Awami League. It killed Hindus who it believed were financing the Awami League because of the party's demands for virtual autonomy from the army-dominated central government.

But Bengali Moslems killed thousands of non-Bengali Moslems, people known as Biharis because they fled into Pakistan from Indian Bihar 24 years ago and spoke Urdu instead of Bengali. Biharis retaliated against Bengalis, both Moslem and Hindu.

BODIES MUTILATED

All groups were among the six million persons who fled into India. But the majority were Hindus.

Killings continued after the army gained control of major eastern towns. In mid-June, according to railway workers in the junction town of Saidpur, about 145 Hindus were loaded by martial law authorities on two railway cars and promised they would be taken to the Indian border. Most were well-to-do businessmen and their families.

Witnesses say the train stopped several miles outside

Pakistan, a nation divided by 1,000 miles of India, is torn by a civil war growing out of East Pakistanis' feeling they are not served by the central government based in the West. An effort to split off the East brought in troops from the West and spurred the departure of six million refugees into India. Here is an uncensored dispatch of the way East Pakistan looks today.

RAHMAN
... imprisoned

town and was attacked by angry Biharis. Missionary sources state that about 25 persons survived.

Much of the fury was the result of a massacre in the early days by Bengalis of non-Bengali workers at Santahar, junction about 15 miles west of Bogra.

"It was the worst sight I ever have seen in my life," said engineer Lt.-Col. M. A. Khan. He estimated 1,000 bodies, many cruelly mutilated, lay around the railway station in mid-April.

CAUGHT IN MIDDLE

Others in the town estimated the toll at 10,000 or 20,000. The sight of dead Urdu-speaking, non-Bengali infuriated Urdu-speaking soldiers from West Pakistan. A Bengali businessman says the army wiped out the village of Naogson, three miles west of Santahar, with its population of 400.

Biharis hunted down Bengalis in revenge.

Many people are caught in the middle. Seventy Christians, a minute minority in this predominantly Moslem province, have taken refuge in a mission house where six Italian nuns live in Saidpur. Three hundred persons, including two Hindu families, are in the Catholic mission compound in Dinajpur.

Saidpur, a town of about 25,000, has become a Bihari stronghold. Residents say virtually no Bengalis live there.

Indications are the struggle between Bihari and Bengali cut deeper than anti-Hindu feeling in the army. Most Hindus fled, but some lower castes remained.

Despite official appeals that the Hindus return to Pakistan, few expect they will. Army authorities in Dacca ordered the pulling down of two Hindu temples. The day before Yahya, June 28 speech, promising a return to civilian rule and reiterating his appeal for the return of Hindu refugees, an army platoon shot four Hindus and burned a Hindu bazaar and homes in the village of Boliadi, 30 miles from Dacca.

Many bank accounts of departed Hindus have been frozen. Jute enterprises of such Hindus have been seized. Lands not sold by Hindus who fled have been auctioned off.

To many soldiers, Bengalis are simply Hindus, no matter if they profess Islam.

MANY CONFIDENT

The Pakistan army in the field believes it has saved Pakistan from secession; the Hindus it has killed or driven away were Indians; and the Bengalis it has dispatched all were backers of a man they see as a traitor, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. The army believes it can hold Bengali resistance.

"Pinpricks, pinpricks," said Lt.-Col. Khan, "from a small clique easily bought by the Indians."

But the pinpricks continue. Bombs continue to explode in Dacca; bridges go down in Rajshahi and elsewhere and men who collaborate with army authorities are murdered.

One associate of Sheikh Mujibur's, S. B. Zaman, has dissociated himself from the league and has co-operated with the army.

Young backers of the Awami League and the leftist wings of the National Awami party headed, respectively, by the Maoist Moslem preacher, Maulana Abdul Hamid Khan Bhashani, 89, and pro-Moscow Prof. Muzaffar Ahmed, move freely across the border between Calcutta and Dacca.

REBELS WANT WAR

The rebels promise a war by the end of the rains in October, coinciding with Gen. Yahya's plans to start the transfer of power.

But many Bengalis, ordinarily a non-martial people, impressed with the army's grim drive and willingness to use firepower, believe they cannot take independence through the barrel of a gun.

The difference between the frail Bengali farmer and the tall, thick-chested soldier from West Pakistan was never more apparent. As the Pakistan army advanced into North Bengal the Bengali resistance melted before it. Catholic missionaries in Dinajpur say Bengali forces fled for the Indian border the moment the first army shell hit the town.

Some Bengalis hope the army crackdown eventually may backfire. Said one Awami League backer in Dacca:

"Let the army go on with their operation. It is the best thing for the Bengali Moslem. Ordinarily, he would seek no help from the Indian Hindu. But it is better for him to do that than to live with these barbarians."

Violent Earthquake

RABAU, New Britain (Reuters) — A violent earthquake centred in the adjacent Solomon Islands area in the Pacific, northeast of Australia, caused widespread destruction here today.

Three persons are believed to have been injured but there were no initial reports of deaths.

The quake, and a seven-foot high tidal wave that reached here five minutes later, caused damage estimated in the thousands of dollars.

The National Earthquake Information Centre in Washington reported that an earthquake with a magnitude of 8.1 on the open-ended Richter scale struck the Solomon Islands in the Pacific at 4:11 p.m. (2:11 a.m. EDT) today.

James Bay Potential 'Staggering'

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa's go-ahead signal on the giant James Bay hydro development plan has raised visions of an economic leap-forward for Quebec but there may be some road-blocks in the way of what could be one of the world's greatest hydro projects.

The $6,000 million project is expected to result in production of as much hydro power as now is produced by the whole provincial government utility.

Hydro-Quebec—more than 10 million kilowatts.

The World Almanac lists the world's top power project at present as the Grand Coulee of the United States with an eventual capacity of 9,771 million kilowatts.

James Bay will open up mining and forestry operations, unlocking the resource wealth of northern Quebec as roads and railways are built into the area.

The potential is staggering. The project, in preliminary outlines at least, could mark the opening phase of a new economic era, a shot-in-the-arm boost to overcome an investment and development malaise that has afflicted Quebec in recent years.

PRICKLY DEBATE

Nevertheless, some uncertainty hangs over the huge plan announced with skinny details by Premier Bourassa April 30.

It is certain to arouse political controversy and might well provoke a prickly debate between Ottawa and Quebec City. The 1959 National Energy Board Act gives that body power to examine all aspects of any proposed export of power.

Also some authorities have raised the question of the effect on the Canadian dollar—Canada's consequent ability to export goods—as a result of the importation of huge amounts of capital needed to complete the project.

Premier Bourassa disclosed the plan to a Liberal party rally marking his government's first year in power. He said then the venture would create 125,000 jobs, 3,500 of them by the end of this year.

He described the project as "the very symbol of Quebec at work."

But Mr. Bourassa was unable to reveal financing arrangements immediately.

The 37-year-old premier has been seeking investors in the project since his government came to power in the Quebec general election April 29, 1970.

PRELIMINARY WORK

The government has said it will ask the national assembly to approve expenditures of $26 million this year for preliminary work on James Bay.

The money will be spent on access roads, landing strips, surveys and studies, land-clearing, engineering works, telecommunications installations, purchasing of equipment and construction materials and transportation.

Asked by reporters for details on the over-all financing, Mr. Bourassa said "the money will come from where the money is."

The premier made these points:

—There is an urgent demand for electricity in the United States, particularly in New York state, which provides an instant market for power from the project;

—Other forms of energy such as nuclear or thermal energy are more expensive than hydro, and have not yet been developed to the point where they can provide acceptable alternatives;

—Plans are flexible enough to allow development (or postponement) as financing becomes available.

Technical details have not yet been completed, though Premier Bourassa has authorized an immediate start on construction based on reports by Hydro-Quebec engineers and by two private civil engineering companies.

The plan calls for harnessing of five rivers emptying into James Bay—the Rupert, Nottaway and Broadback, which form Phase I, and the Eastmain and Grande, on which studies so far are limited.

The report of one engineering firm suggests the project be undertaken in seven stages, beginning with part of the Rupert River and Lake Mistassini, its reservoir, including construction of only five of nine planned powerhouses.

Electricity would be produced from this phase and revenue would be earned as the following stages are about to start or are in early stages.

Thus the project would help finance itself to some degree, reducing the borrowing needs and subsequent interest payments.

Later phases would gradually bring in the rest of the Rupert and the other four rivers. The second phase would not begin until 1975.

JO BFORECAST

Critics have expressed doubts at Mr. Bourassa's forecast that 125,000 new jobs will be created, suggesting that the premier's estimate of 56,000 construction jobs may be unrealistic.

A report to shareholders by British Newfoundland Corp.—Brinco—on the huge Churchill Falls project in Labrador shows that project will reach peak employment of 4,200 jobs this summer. Peak employment on the three-dam Columbia River projects in British Columbia was 4,000 men.

The Manic 3 dam on the Manicouagan River in north-eastern Quebec will reach a peak of 2,500 construction workers three years from now.

Possible export of James Bay power raises one political question.

The National Energy Board Act gives that body power to examine the matter and on the board's advice, the federal government rules on the proposed export. Duration of an export licence may no longer exceed 25 years.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene has referred often to the Canadian determination to avoid long-term commitments of power and energy resources to export markets.

In a speech Sept. 23, 1970, at Portland, Ore., he said Canada's concern arises in part from "the history of export of power generated at Niagara Falls and on the St. Lawrence River in the early years of the century, under four long-term, fixed-price contracts—three for 50 years and one for 85 years—which were devoid of any repatriation provisions."

When Canada wanted to repatriate some of that energy during the Second World War, it was unable to do so.

Any commitment of power for export from James Bay, as a means of financing the project, is bound to raise comparisons with the Columbia River power treaty, ratified in 1964 after protracted controversy, and the subsequent negotiations between the Quebec government and Brinco over disposition of power from Churchill Falls.

NEEDS POWER

The 60-year Columbia treaty disposed of the power benefits of three big dams built in B.C. for 30 years in return for a lump-sum payment of $275 million. Subsequently U.S. authorities decided they could increase power generation on the lower Columbia by a further seven million kilowatts—the original project had a capacity of four million—as a result of storage control in Canada, but there was to be no additional payment to Canada.

Just this year, in January, the National Energy Board authorized British Columbia to transfer power from the lower mainland area to south-eastern.

It will cost B.C. $9.5 million in capital investment plus an additional payment of $312,000 to the U.S. power authority to make up the deficit.

Brinco had originally planned to export power from Churchill Falls to New York, but the Quebec government—through whose territory the power would have to pass—said it would need the power.

Quebec contracted to buy all of Churchill Falls output surplus to Newfoundland needs for 40 years, thus barring any direct export by Brinco. Churchill Falls is scheduled to start operations next year and have a capacity of 5.25 million kilowatts by 1976.

On Mr. Bourassa's financing plans, raising $6,000 million might well present a conflict if there were simultaneous efforts to raise the estimated $2,500 million that would be needed to build a natural-gas pipeline from northern Alaska through Canada to the U.S. An oil pipeline on the same route would cost another $2,500 million.

Eric Kierans, former communications minister, and others have said that raising such enormous amounts of capital from the U.S. would not only tend to commit Canadian energy resources to that market but would also make it more difficult to sell Canadian manufactures in export markets.

A huge influx of U.S. funds to finance big projects would increase Canada's U.S. currency reserves and exert upward pressure on the exchange value of the Canadian dollar in international currency markets.

That, in effect, would make Canadian goods more expensive—hence more difficult to sell—in foreign markets, tending to depress productive activity and employment at home.

That problem was avoided to some extent in payment arrangements under the Columbia treaty. The federal government, which received the lump-sum payment and transferred it to the B.C. government in Canadian funds, immediately reinvested most of the actual U.S. funds in U.S. non-negotiable securities that matured in sums of $25 million each year. That way, a sudden shift of U.S. funds into Canadian reserves was avoided. Instead, the arrangement let the funds trickle into Canada over a period of almost 10 years.

ENVIRONMENTAL RISKS

Victor Goldbloom, Quebec minister responsible for the environment, says ecological considerations were involved in Quebec's decision to go ahead with the James Bay project rather than several thermal or nuclear energy centres.

But he conceded there are certain environmental risks involved in the project—protection of wildlife in areas affected, and ensuring that man adapts to a northern environment without destroying it.

Despite obstacles and unanswered questions, officials say the province has no other choice but to go ahead with the development.

If Quebec is to have enough energy to supply its own needs by 1980, James Bay will have to produce a large part of it. Experts have forecast that Quebec's energy requirements will double in this decade.

GALLUP POLL

Westerners Believe Royal Role Hindered

(World Copyright Reserved)

Complaints from critics that the Trudeau government is downgrading the role of monarchy are denied by only a slightly smaller segment of the population than the one which accepts it as a fact. In effect, just under four-in-ten say this is being done, while just over four-in-ten deny it.

Whatever actions the government has taken, viewpoints vary regionally, a great deal. In the maritimes and the west, almost half the adults believe the part monarchy plays is being lessened, while about a third say it is not. The reverse is true in Quebec and Ontario, where considerably more people feel that it is not being reduced, than think it is.

Males divide very closely with rather more thinking it is, than not, while women more undecided on the question, believes by a ratio of about four-to-three, that the monarchy is not being downgraded.

The question:

"Just from what you have heard or read, is it your impression that the liberal government in Ottawa, is downgrading the role of the monarchy in Canada or not?"

The table below shows the national opinion, as compared with that of the various regions, and of men and women.

	Yes	No	Undecided

Youth Arrested After Bomb Scare

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today that a St. Louis teen-ager was arrested in connection with an attempt to extort $30,000 from St. Louis International Airport under a bomb threat.

William R. Kammer, 18, was arrested less than six hours after the bomb threat was telephoned to the airport manager's office Tuesday. William A. Sullivan, head of the St. Louis FBI office, said the announcement was withheld while the youth was questioned.

Sullivan said the FBI would seek warrants charging extortion and assaulting a federal officer.

Sullivan said a man with a voice that sounded young called the airport manager's office at 2 p.m. and said for $30,000 he would divulge the location of a bomb aboard a plane. But the FBI, following directions and a crude map left at a public telephone booth about nine miles southeast of the airport, set a trap.

Agents placed a dummy money package in an abandoned car near dense woods and set up a stakeout.

Sullivan said a bushy-haired man about 20 years old emerged from the woods, picked up the package and started back toward the trees.

An agent stepped into the open, identified himself and called on the man to surrender, Sullivan said.

Instead, agents said, the man fired two shots at the agent and fled into the woods. The agent returned the fire. Neither man was hit.

Sullivan said Kammer was arrested at his home about 7:30 p.m. He was traced through an automobile licence plate.

"He had reported to St. Louis police that his car was stolen," Sullivan said.

"In conducting an investigation of the neighborhood near the wooded area, we found a Chevrolet and recorded its licence number about the time of the shooting," he said.

"That number checked with the plate on the car that had been reported stolen."

Missouri Lutherans To Stay With Council

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Brushing aside pressures to go it alone, the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, intends to keep working with other branches of that tradition, but with a closer watch on doctrinal matters.

It had ordered a review of the work in that area, among others, as carried on by the Lutheran Council in the United States.

In taking the action Tuesday night, the denomination's governing convention threw out about 60 proposals that it pulled out of the council, the co-operative organization of three major Lutheran bodies in the U.S.

The Missouri Synod is the most conservative among them.

At the same time, the governing convention of the 2.8-million-member church took up controversial proposals to break communion with the 2.5-million-member American Lutheran Church, and to sharpen its own controls on belief.

The "iron fist" is how Rev. Dean Lucking of River Forest, Ill., described the measure that would bind members to conventional doctrinal definitions.

INFALIBILITY DENIED

"It's not Lutheran," he added, recalling assertions by the 16th-century Protestant reformer Martin Luther that councils could err and none could bind the conscience.

Others said the measure would allow for the most extensive regulations on interpretations of Scripture of any main-line Protestant denomination.

Rev. Robert McMiller of Okauchee, Wis., maintained the step was needed to curb those who have "troubled the church for so many years with various abuses."

The measure would make convention resolutions on doctrine of "binding force," and forbid any expression of dissent except through official channels, with the alternative of quitting the church.

At present, Lutherans are obliged to accept only the Scriptures and their confessional creeds.

After an hour's debate, a decision on the matter was deferred. The eight-day convention runs through Friday.

On another issue, the church reaffirmed and made more absolute its ban in ministers, declaring the "word of God does not permit women" to serve in any pastoral capacity.

CRAB'S STARE TOO MUCH TO SWALLOW

TORQUAY, England (CP) — A Devon hotel chief, complimented by a customer on a lobster dish, returned the compliment by showing him the following day's fresh crab, but it was a bit too much for the customer to swallow when the crab opened its eyes sadly and stared at him.

Next day it was returned to the sea, alive and well. The customer paid.

STUDENT PARITY? NOT YET: WHITE

TORONTO (CP) — University Affairs Minister John White said Tuesday that academics, the public and some politicians are not ready for student-faculty parity on a new body to govern University of Toronto, but consideration will be given to other alternatives to government proposals for its makeup.

Mr. White, interviewed after a closed meeting of a select committee of legislators and members of the university community, said:

"I don't think the faculty, administration, board of governors or the public at large are ready for equal student representation with faculty in 1971."

"I expect some opposition members are not ready for it either."

The committee will report today to the Ontario legislature's human resources committee.

Three new proposals for composition of the university's governing council will be submitted to this committee.

One proposal would give the faculty 10 seats and students six and add four members to be chosen by the university president.

dent from among students and the faculty.

Mr. White said this formula would "enable the president, on the advice of the president's council or the governing council, to provide changing proportions of faculty and students to meet changing conditions on campus or changing attitudes in the public at large."

The other proposals would set the faculty-student ratio at 10-8 and 12-8.

The human resources committee is studying a bill that would replace the university senate and board of governors with a 42-member governing council. The bill is regarded as model legislation for other Ontario universities.

Travelling Bass Vic Fair Highlight

It's one of the biggest instruments in the orchestra. To perform it most musicians sit on a high stool because it is as tall—sometimes taller than its players. And even a fat musician is no wider.

When the bass fiddle travels by air, like its more moderately proportioned relative, the cello, it requires a ticket for a takes up a complete passenger space.

Nevertheless, Robert Meyer double bass has done as much travelling as most musicians' flutes or violins.

At the moment, for instance, Meyer and his bass commute every week between Vancouver and Victoria to rehearse and play with the Victoria Fair festival orchestra.

Principal bass with both the Vancouver and CBC Symphony Orchestras, he is, says festival director George Corwin, "undoubtedly one of the best bass players in the world today."

Bob Meyer came to Vancouver in 1965 from England where his professional career began at the age of 21 as principal bass with the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra.

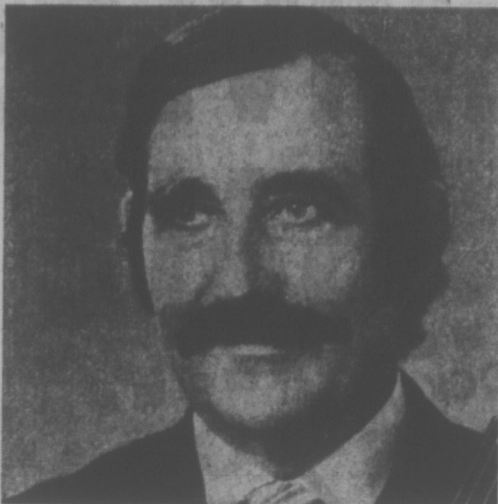

Subsequently he was invited by Sir Thomas Beecham to join his orchestra and he also spent much time during the next five years with Benjamin Britten's English Opera Group Chamber Orchestra.

His other orchestras have included the English Chamber Orchestra, London Philharmonic, London Symphony. He has toured the world and for a time played in the Moscow Chamber Orchestra.

His presence in the Festival Chamber Orchestra and the ensemble is, in itself, an indication of the fine calibre of the ensemble.

Tonight and Friday the program will feature Haydn's "Trauer" Symphony, undoubtedly one of his greatest and most moving works, and Ravel's homage to 18th century French music, Le Tombeau de Couperin.

Soprano Catherine Young will be soloist with the orchestra in a work originally commissioned from Samuel Barber by American soprano Eleanor Steber.

MEYER . . . commuting

Barber, whose style is basically lyric and even tonal, responded to the commission with a setting of a James Agee's nostalgic prose-poem dealing with childhood memories of life in a southern town—Knoxville, Summer of 1915.

All concerts take place in the MacLaurin auditorium on the University of Victoria campus, starting at 8 p.m.

CANADIAN WALKOUT HINTED

U.S. Dock Strike Continues

Ogden Point port facilities remain unaffected by the strike of longshoremen which is in its 14th day and has closed 34 United States Pacific ports from California to Washington.

However, the picture is much different in Vancouver, where ships with U.S.-bound cargo have gone for landing, severely overtaxing facilities and jamming the harbor.

Union officials have suggested that if the U.S. strike deadlock continues, Canadian longshoremen will walk out as well in support of the U.S. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union demands.

"No meetings have been scheduled," said James Robertson of San Francisco, spokesman for the employer, Pacific Maritime Association. "We have only 11 vessels working on the coast and they're hauling military cargo."

Negotiations were broken off June 30 between the PMA and ILWU in a contract dispute which virtually halted commercial shipping in California, Oregon and Washington state.

The coast-wide walkout by 15,000 ILWU workers has produced severe repercussions in related Port of Portland industries, affecting almost $20 million in annual payroll.

A tug and barge line with 752 employees and a $7.7 million annual income was hardest hit of the idle industries there. Of 15 tug firms in the Columbia River region, all are out of work except a few moving logs in the river.

Others idle include 235 steamship employees and 700 in grain and industrial dock work, as well as 2,510 Teamsters and longshoremen in loading and unloading jobs.

Under an agreement with the longshoremen, three Seattle shipping firms are continuing to make weekly shipments of barge freight to Alaska. Some railroad barges are also leaving for Alaska.

Challenge Reissued

WINNIPEG (CP) — The president of Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Co. Tuesday reiterated a challenge to Manitoba's NDP government to compete against his company with its compulsory state-run automobile insurance program.

G. C. Trites made the statement before the legislature's law amendments committee during a stormy presentation that was interrupted consistently by bickering and procedural arguments.

Trites was appearing to speak on a bill amending the Automobile Insurance Act, passed last year after months of bitter debate.

Saanich Bakery Firm Plans to Expand

McDonald's Bakery Ltd. is planning a $1 million expansion of its Saanich plant, it was disclosed Tuesday night.

Company president John McDonald told Saanich public works committee the expansion is needed to increase productivity to meet increasing competition.

The $1 million would be divided into $300,000 for land and $700,000 for equipment, he said.

"If we stay in our present facility with present production per man we'll be out of business soon," he said.

AID ASKED

McDonald said the expansion requires $6,000 worth of drain work and $2,700 under the road allowance. He asked that Saanich pay the $2,700 because the company pays substantial taxes, because the financing on the expansion is major and because it is to the benefit of all citizens for council to encourage development of secondary industry.

Several members of the committee contended that the municipality would be violating its own policy if it paid for the work and would set a precedent for others to demand similar treatment.

The committee agreed to table the request for more information and also called for a report on the condition, described as poor, of Culdith Road.

SAVAGE RENEWS BID TO ESTABLISH MALL

SAVAGE . . . idea proven

Ald. Clyde Savage renewed his drive to establish a pedestrian mall on Broad Street at a meeting of the municipal parks committee Tuesday.

Savage said the popularity of the Eaton's-operated mall in the area proves the idea worthwhile, and suggested polling merchants on Broad for their ideas.

He predicted an eventual two-level traffic system with offices and apartments on the upper level above a park-like setting "which the downtown area is in serious need of at this time."

City manager Bill Hooson said any decision on the matter would be made after completion of a city study of the downtown area.

55 SIGN PETITION

Crossing Bid Fails

A petition signed by 55 residents seeking a safety crosswalk on Seaton Road at Carey was rejected by Saanich public works committee Tuesday night on grounds the intersection is already safe.

D. G. Laughren, 3861 Carey, said there is a need for a pedestrian crosswalk and added that "if there is a fatal accident, I hope your conscience will not bother you too much."

A report said engineering and police officials had looked at the site and recommended against a crosswalk because the unmarked crosswalk has proved safe and pedestrian volume is light.

Ald. Edith Gunning said she has seen a number of accidents in crosswalks where the pedestrians felt they were "home free." Ald. William Campbell added that 84 per cent of Vancouver accidents are in crosswalks.

Laughren suggested consideration of a 20-mile-an-hour zone by acting engineer John Cowlin suggested this wouldn't be obeyed.

"Most motorists drive reasonably in accordance with prevailing conditions," he said, and signs likely wouldn't deter the others.

"If the police force concentrated on this road it might be done," said Laughren.

When Ald. Leslie Passmore said a painted crosswalk will create a greater hazard. Laughren said a motorist will pay more attention to a painted crosswalk than an unpainted one.

Retired Minister Dies

A United Church of Canada minister living in Victoria died last week after only three days of retirement.

Rev. Gordon G. McLaren died July 4 at the age of 64. He retired July 1 and married his second wife June 19.

He served in pastorates at Wells, Armstrong, Nelson, Prince George and Vancouver before retiring. His latest post was at Ocean Falls United Church, from which he was retired for disability.

McLaren served at various positions within the United Church administration. He was a member of the Masonic Order.

He leaves his wife, Jean, of Victoria; his son, Bruce; daughters Donna Mary Mercer and step-daughters Dolores Kyle and Shirley McMillan.

'Musical Has Yet to Reach Full Maturity'

By PHIL THOMAS

NEW YORK (AP)—The musical long has graced the American stage with its songs and dances, but Dale Wasserman feels the time has come for the form to expand its horizons.

Wasserman, writer of the successful musical Man of La Mancha, which recently completed a near-six-year-run on Broadway, says: "The musical form is one of the most potent that exists, but I don't think it has come to its full maturity yet."

"I am very fond of the musical, but not in the conventional way. I'd like to make it encompass a range of subjects that it just hasn't dealt with in the theatre. "Music for me," he continues, "is one more dimension of theatrical expression. I think we are going to see more and more progress to the serious musical form."

Wasserman thinks his Man of La Mancha helped open the door to the form he foresees for the musical, noting that "it was very much like a religious experience for some people."

RAPS INTERMISSIONS

The 50-year-old writer also thinks the musical should not have an intermission—as he demonstrated in La Mancha.

Drinking And Dancing

PARIS (Reuter)—Thousands of tourists joined Parisians in drinking, dancing and singing the night away to bring in the 182nd anniversary today of the storming of the Bastille and the start of the French Revolution in 1789.

Paris police turned a deaf ear to the revelry.

France today will put some of its military might on show in the traditional Bastille Day military parade down the Champs Elysees.

More than 10,000 soldiers and several hundred tanks and armored cars will take part in the parade with 200 planes roaring overhead.

"I don't believe in them," the soft-spoken, amiable man says flatly. "I see no reason to release the audience. Intermission breaks the continuity of the work. It releases tension, breaks mood. It allows the audience to discuss and examine the illusion I try to create and I don't want them doing that."

Wasserman is currently working on a new musical, tentatively titled Montparnasse. He doesn't care to discuss the work at length but does say that the play "is going to be as radical in its own way as La Mancha was."

"It will be an examination of the difference between what we think we are going to be and what we eventually become. Or where and when does the betrayal happen?"

With the closing of La Mancha, Wasserman's latest theatrical offering is One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest—a non-musical which is having its second time around. It is based on the novel by Ken Kesey.

OPENED IN 1963

The play originally opened in 1963 and folded after 82 performances. It was revived in 1970 in an off-Broadway house and, in Wasserman's words, "was suddenly a big hit."

The latest production was "substantially the same as the first," Wasserman says.

"It is the audience that is revised."

The play, which deals with the inmates of an insane asylum that is intended to symbolize American society, "shocked and frightened the audience in 1963 and they reacted with anger," he says.

"But in the last seven or eight years the profound changes in America—the disintegration of society, the change in mores, the political structure—have created an audience that appreciates this play and subscribes to its political structure—have enthusiastically to it."

HOME GARDEN

Choose Perennials Carefully

By HILDA BEASTALL

Herbaceous perennials are as important in today's garden picture as at any time in the past, but the focus has shifted. Seventy years ago complete wide, long borders were devoted solely to displays of flowering perennials.

Today we feel more satisfied to grow a half-dozen different kinds of perennials to give us just the right form of leaf and flower, with flower color almost of secondary consideration.

We grow the perennials in conjunction with our shrubs, which we consider the mainstay of our gardens since they are of permanent year-long value.

Depending on our choice of perennials, they may be capable of many years duration in our shrub border without needing more than casual attention to removal of faded flowers and the browned leaves in late fall.

Renewal of soil components by spreading old manure and compost on the surface is necessary with any garden scheme.

If we choose wisely, we may enjoy something new and different with our perennials by growing a few kinds which require renewal after two or three years. In this way we keep alive our sense of awareness and observation — we must decide whether we like the plant well enough to renew the planting or we shall try something entirely new.

A plant may be suitable for another position, with a quite different environment. Or we may want to hunt around for another color variety, or one of different height in the same genus.

Habit of growth, shape and color of foliage are all of equal importance with flower color when you consider planting herbaceous perennials in a permanent garden.

Growth begins anywhere from March to May, making young shoots and unfolding leaves an attraction in the early spring days.

Some perennials put on a fall color show of foliage equal to the maples, birches and dogwoods; these need to be seen growing in your own garden so that you may assess their value in your framework of existing shrubs and trees.

Perennials have gone a long way since phloxes, delphiniums, Shasta-daisies and lupins were the chief components of the herbaceous border, but many improved forms of these same plants are waiting to be given a chance to feature in a prominent role in today's more permanent background of an all-year-round garden.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal, which is presented in the form of a "mystery," is actually a most simple one to play correctly. But when the hand actually arose in a tenth-of-a-cent rubber-bridge game, our South declarer misplayed it. What was South's error?

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

 ♥ 642
 ♦ K 10 9 8 7 2
 ♣ K 5

EAST
 ♠ K J 9 7
 ♥ 9 8 3
 ♣ Q J 10 9 2

SOUTH
 ♥ A J 7
 ♦ A Q
 ♣ A 8 4 3

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1♠ Pass 1♦ Pass
 2NT Pass 3NT Pass
 Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

Declarer made the correct play when he permitted West's king of hearts to capture the opening lead. Had West continued the heart suit, South would have made two heart tricks. But West, seeing his partner's discouraging play of the heart three on the opening lead, abandoned the heart suit. At trick two he led the club seven. East's nine being taken by South's ace.

South next played the ace and queen of diamonds, trusting that both opponents would follow suit. Had they done so (as they figured to do, mathematically), dummy would have been entered via the club king. The diamond king would then pick up the outstanding diamond, and South would make six diamond tricks.

But, as is evident, East did not follow suit to the second diamond lead. It now became impossible for declarer to both establish and cash the diamond suit, since he had but one entry to dummy.

When play had ended, South had incurred a two-trick set. What was his error?

Basically, South's mistake was a fundamental one; he forgot to count his winning tricks. Had he counted, he would have perceived that he needed five (not six) diamond tricks to fulfill his contract. And they were there for the taking, no matter how the missing diamonds were divided.

After cashing the diamond ace, South would next lead the diamond queen, overtaking it with the board's king. The ten of diamonds would then be given away to West's jack. Five diamond tricks would now be cashable.

Admittedly, by overtaking the queen with the king, South would be giving away an overtrick whenever either of the opponents possessed the tripleton J-x-x of diamonds. But, with a vulnerable game at stake, South should have been happy to have given away a potential overtrick to guarantee his contract.

When John is a year older than half as old as Betty will be when John is a year younger than twice as old as Betty is now, Betty will be twice as old as John was when Betty was a year younger than John is now.

John is in his teens, and we have taken ages in complete years. What are their ages?

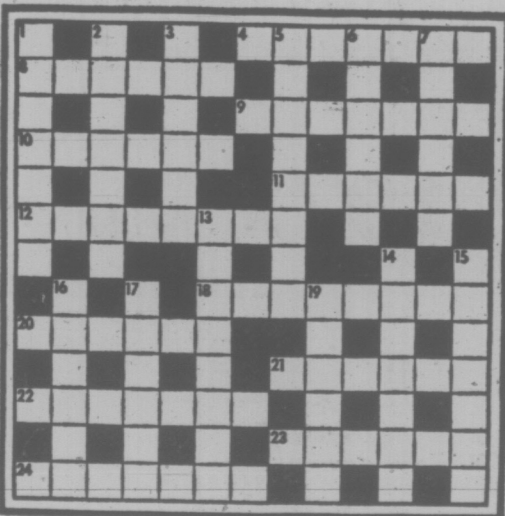

(Answer tomorrow)
 Yesterday's answer: Seven mangoes.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

WAIT UNTIL YOU HEAR THIS

BARNESLEY, England (CP) — Pensioner Johnny Eden could not believe his ears after he blew his nose hard—he was suddenly able to hear again for the first time in eight years, the 72-year-old Yorkshireman said it was like "the crack of a cannon." A local hospital spokesman explained that "the deafness would be due to blockage of tubes leading to the middle ear. The nose blow must have cleared this."

Loffmark Should Quit Says NDP Chieftain

New Democratic Party Leader Dave Barrett said Tuesday that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark should resign over his handling of the heroin addiction problem in B.C.

Referring to an attack Monday by Loffmark who accused the Vancouver newspapers of trying to "embarrass the government" on the heroin issue, Barrett said:

"It smacks of paranoia..." Barrett said it was "incredible" for Loffmark to attempt to blame the federal government for inaction on the drug problem when B.C. has failed to take any action on its own.

MFDCS DEFENDED

Barrett also defended the medical profession, which Loffmark earlier described as unwilling to do its part in treating heroin addicts.

Loffmark said Monday that B.C. is not in a position to act against heroin addiction until federal financial support is forthcoming for the B.C. Narcotic Addiction Foundation.

He said Ottawa has withdrawn its half of the $300,000 operating grant for the foundation. A foundation spokesman said the federal grant is under negotiation.

Loffmark was quoted Monday as saying a Vancouver newspaper was "conspiring to attack the provincial government" on the heroin issue.

NO ALTERNATIVE

Barrett said there is now no alternative for Loffmark but to resign. Barrett said the government deliberately killed his 1968 effort to continue the activities of the special legislative committee investigating drug abuse in B.C.

Now, "the whole narcotics situation is saving in around him," Barrett said.

Farmers Concerned

SASKATOON (CP) — The National Farmers Union has sent telegrams to three cabinet ministers expressing concern that diversion of United States cargoes to Vancouver may pose a threat to rapid movement of Canadian grain exports. ### Comparisons Made REGINA (CP) — Three young Nova Scotians, conducting a cross-Canada litter-hunt under the Opportunities for Youth program, arrived in Regina Tuesday and reported that Saskatchewan is the "sec-

"We've found, on the average, 5,384 pieces of litter in every mile of highway in this province," said Norval Dunfee, 22, who is heading the team of Peter Underwood, 19, and John Crace, 18.

He said New Brunswick was the worst so far as litter was concerned with an average of 5,727 pieces of garbage each mile.

SUMMER'S HERE AT LONG LAST

Get out the shorts and the sun tan lotion — the warm weather is here to stay at least until Friday.

The thermometer soared to 74 Tuesday, five degrees lower than this year's record of 79, set May 11. It is expected to creep higher in the next few days.

Boaters in the Strait of Juan de Fuca have been warned that the ridge of high pressure covering the coast has brought a fog hazard.

Weather office officials say a thermal trough now off Oregon and Washington may move in, clearing the fog.

But the sun stays.

Air Canada Shutdown Looms

Times News Services

Air Canada's ground staff returned to work Tuesday night after voting in favor of rotating strikes which could begin Thursday and which might force the airline to shut down.

HEFTY FARE VANISHES

TORONTO (CP) — Kanhai Ramgoolam, an east Indian businessman, experienced double trouble Tuesday because of the walkout by Air Canada ground workers.

The walkout caused postponement of Mr. Ramgoolam's flight to New York, where he had a business meeting.

He paid a cab driver $210 in advance to drive him to New York. The driver disappeared with the money, apparently to buy gasoline, and didn't come back.

The cab later was found abandoned, and Mr. Ramgoolam missed his appointment.

Police said Felix Irvine Rogers, 28, of Toronto was arrested and charged with theft and illegal possession of cash.

Phones Ringing In Bell Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phone companies kept service going as up to 500,000 U.S. workers went on strike against the Bell system today but prepared to halt repair service and installations.

Supervisory personnel filled in at switchboards after members of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America walked out at 6 a.m. EDT. Brief wildcat walkouts preceded the strike in many cities.

A union spokesman said the virtually nationwide walkout would last at least two weeks because of complicated labor ratification procedures. The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said it was too early to determine the effects.

"But people can expect to hear a lot of male voices when calling the operator," said information officer Chuck dynes.

SYSTEM AUTOMATED

Because telephones are so highly automated, most calls will continue to go through until lack of maintenance causes breakdowns.

In strike-affected areas many new telephone installations were halted, as was repair service on all but government-operated telephones.

The strike by the CWA and allied unions is over wages and fringe issues, including the CWA's demand for an agency shop and the company's alleged "anti-feminist" job policies.

Assault, Drug Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ronald Storm, 25, of Vancouver was committed for trial in British Columbia supreme court on five charges involving drugs and indecent assault.

Charges allege that a stupefying or overpowering drug was administered to two women aged 19 and 23 on May 9 so that sexual relations could be forced on them.

Another charge alleges that one of the women was indecently assaulted May 15.

POLICE PICKETS PATROL in front of Victoria City Hall this morning, to inform the public they are NOT on strike. ## Peace Talks in Doubt As U.S. Envoy Resigns

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuter) — President Nixon worked today on a response to the latest Viet Cong peace initiative, a situation clouded by a request by David K. E. Bruce to be relieved as chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks.

The move by Bruce, 73, was confirmed by the Western White House as Nixon was reviewing the Viet Cong plan put forward two weeks ago. Informed sources said Bruce wanted to quit for personal reasons.

Nixon might discuss today the timing of Bruce's departure when he again meets Henry A. Kissinger, his national security adviser who arrived here Tuesday after a globe-circling tour.

Bruce apparently asked to be relieved when he was in Washington in May.

Diplomatic observers believed a leak of Bruce's resignation request upset the administration and was almost certain to complicate its response to the Viet Cong peace plan.

Kissinger discussed the peace plan with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon and with Bruce in Paris.

White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler appeared to indicate that Nixon is anxious to keep Bruce in Paris because of the delicate state of the negotiations there and the interruption which might result while a new American master the problems.

But diplomatic observers felt the Communists would regard Bruce as a lame duck with no real mandate to negotiate seriously, which might force the president to replace him quickly.

Restraint Sought

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Friends Service Committee, 18 individuals and the Philadelphia Resistance anti-war group filed a court suit today seeking to enjoin the FBI from alleged political harassment, intimidation and surveillance.

Jordan Uses Force

By The Associated Press

Jordanian army units dislodged Palestinian guerrillas from populated areas in northern Jordan today after they refused to leave voluntarily, a government spokesman said.

He denied charges by the Palestinian resistance movement that the army is trying to liquidate the guerrillas in Jordan and accused them of firing on farmers in a bid to destroy the country's economy.

In Cairo, Egypt expressed deep concern over the renewed fighting and asked King Hussein through diplomatic channels to postpone a visit to Cairo July 23.

In its statement, Egypt said Jordan's crackdown can only serve Israel, the enemy of the Arabs.

Peace Talks? Invite Us!—China

HONG KONG (AP) — China is willing to take part in a new international conference on Vietnam, along the lines of the 1954 Geneva parley that ended France's war in Indochina, the leader of the Australian Labor party said today on his return from Peking.

Party leader Gough Whitlam headed a delegation of Laborites who spent 12 days in China and talked with Premier Chou En-lai and other leaders.

"I discussed the Geneva conference and its rival with Chou," Whitlam told a news conference, "and the Chinese are quite willing to participate in any renewed Geneva conference."

Whitlam, whose party is opposed to Australia's participation in the Vietnam war, did not enlarge on Chou's ideas about a conference in Vietnam, but he said:

"The administrative arrangements for a revived Geneva-type conference would have to be more in an Asian framework."

... gets the message

He noted that the convening powers of the 1954 conference — Britain and the Soviet Union — were both European, and only one of the three nations on the International Control Commission set up to police the agreement was Asian. The three nations are India, Canada and Poland.

Whitlam sent Australian Prime Minister William McMahon a cable from Peking saying he was convinced the Viet Cong's peace proposal July 1 gave the United States "an honorable opportunity for early disengagement."

He said today he still believes this and added that China endorses the Viet Cong proposals.

The new feature of the Viet Cong plan was a proposal for the release of all prisoners of war simultaneous with U.S. troop withdrawals if the United States withdraws all its forces by the end of the year.

Peking Visit Not Included For Stanfield

VANCOUVER (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield prepared to leave today for a tour of the Orient, briefed in the thoughts of Chairman Mao but without a visa to visit Mainland China.

He said he had "no intention of waiting around Hong Kong" for a reply and "I am proceeding now on the assumption I won't get a visa."

The Opposition leader, who made his application through the external affairs department about two months ago, said his failure to get into mainland China "ought to be an embarrassment to the government of Canada."

In reply to a question, he said he had made a "systematic study" of the thoughts of Chinese Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung, which he thought were "more relative to the people of China than Canada."

The external affairs department did all that was possible on its part to encourage acceptance of visa applications pursued both through the Chinese embassy in Ottawa and the Canadian embassy in Peking, the spokesman said.

Should the visas come through while Mr. Stanfield was in Japan or Hong Kong, he would not make use of them unless they were accompanied by an invitation to visit Peking.

The Chinese rebuff to Mr. Stanfield follows on the 4½-day visit to Peking in late June and early July by Jean-Luc Pepin, trade and industry minister and the first Canadian minister to visit China in more than two decades.

One Ship Gashed In Strait Mishap

By DOUG MACRAE

Three freighters collided in fog off Race Rocks at 5:30 a.m. today, sending all three back to drydock for repairs.

There were no injuries.

Reports from the scene said the 650-foot Yugoslav bulk carrier Kozara was in collision with two smaller freighters, the Swedish-registered Hoegh Miranda, and the Nordglint, registered in Norway.

The Kozara, her badly-rusted green and white hull punctured in three places above the water line and with ruptures pouring water into holds 1 and 7, limped into Esquimalt Graving Dock at 11:15 a.m.

The freighter, empty and riding high in the water, had two ragged 10-foot gashes in the bow and a low lateral gash in the side near the stern, all about halfway up the hull.

A dock spokesman estimated it would take a week to 10 days to make repairs. The Kozara was en route to Vancouver to pick up general cargo.

The smaller Miranda and Nordglint, both loaded, were anchored off Royal Roads before being taken in to Burrard Drydock in Vancouver for repairs. Facilities at Burrard aren't adequate to cope with the huge Kozara.

Early reports said the Miranda suffered bow damage and the Nordglint a gash in the side of her hull. The Miranda is shipping some water at anchor.

Ken Briggs, of King Brothers, agents for the Kozara, said a complete investigation would be needed to determine the cause of the three-way collision.

"The only thing we can figure at the moment is that there was fog out there," Briggs said.

British Soldier Slain in Ambush

BELFAST (AP) — Gunmen killed another British soldier early today in what appeared to be continued retaliation by the outlawed Irish Republican Army for the death of two civilians.

Guerrillas ambushed four soldiers in a Land-Rover in a Roman Catholic district of West Belfast, firing more than 60 bullets into the vehicle. The driver slumped over the wheel and died in hospital. His companions returned the fire, but the gunmen escaped in the darkness.

The militant provisional wing of the IRA said earlier that one of its snipers was responsible for the killing of a British sentry in Belfast Monday night. It said the slaying was in revenge for two civilians killed by soldiers during a riot in Londonderry last week, and "further retaliatory action will be taken in due course."

The British Army said the two men killed in Londonderry were armed, but the IRA claimed they were innocent bystanders.

EXPECT CONTINUATION

British Army sources said they are convinced that the IRA will not stop at the latest two killings despite heavy political pressure from its own backyard in southern Ireland.

Fine Gael, the main opposition party in the Irish Republic, demanded Tuesday night that the government act quickly to crush "private and secret armies."

Although the party did not specifically name the IRA there was no doubt this was the outfit it wants curbed. The IRA, although officially banned, has in the last two years paraded openly at funerals of its members and at meetings in the republic, wearing their "uniforms" of green or black tunics and berets.

IRA chief of staff Cathal Goulding recently said the organization would revert to "the bullet and the bomb" to achieve its aims—mainly the destruction of the Northern Ireland Protestant-based government, the end of British rule of the North and reunification of Ireland.

OFFICIALS JAILED

Gen. Sir Harry Tuzo, commander of the 11,100 British troops in Northern Ireland, told a news conference Tuesday that 39 "fairly senior" IRA officers are in jail.

He felt the organization had been "considerably embarrassed" by their detention, and he dismissed suggestions the army might withdraw.

"Had the army not been present," he said, "we would undoubtedly have a civil war situation by now."

The killings are having a predictable effect on morale of the troops, first called in when Protestants and Catholics were at each other's throats on the streets in the fall of 1969.

"Their forbearance," said a military source today, "is being pushed beyond endurance."

"They are very, very angry."

Nineteen civilians have died violently in Northern Ireland this year. With the death of the soldier today, the total toll since August, 1969—military and civilian—is 59.

DISEASE SPREADS

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — A disease similar to sleeping sickness spread rapidly through horses in Mexico and Texas today, with the number of sick animals reported in Texas alone increasing to 500 from 100 in a day.

The disease — called Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis — or VEE — is blamed for the deaths of 3,000 horses in Mexico.

There were 100 horses reported sick in Texas on Tuesday and 500 today. Seven Texans and thousands of Mexicans have come down with the flu-like illness.
